Hitler Means It.
Tale of a Baby.
They Just Will Not Rise.
A Bank Robber Annoyed.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

THE ROOSEVELT administration, taking charge of business, with codes establishing wages, hours and days of work, seems violent to some, but what do you think of Chancellor Hitler and his laws that threaten with death anybody that interferes with his plans for running the country's industry as it should be done?

Big business in Germany, far from objecting, says it is delighted with Hitler's program. Krupp von Bohlen, one of Germany's greatest manufacturers, is delighted, and predicts all kinds of wonderful German prosperity.

HERE IN the United States, while codes are prepared to end strikes and make them impossible, 85,000 workers in the garment trades are called out in New York. The strike may be settled today. Such strikes will not be possible when the new industrial recovery scheme starts working, if it works successfully.

Strikes are impossible now in Germany, Italy, Russia; lockouts also impossible.

A NEW YORK hospital and the police tell an interesting tale of a baby. Two mothers, in the maternity hospital together, had babies. One baby died at birth, the other lived. The mother whose baby lived did not want it. She was not married. The other mother, with a cradle ready, asked:

"May I look at your baby? He is so beautiful."

The mother said:

"Do you want him?"

The mother carried home the substitute baby, but her husband would not keep it. Said he:

"No baby unless it's our own."

Now the baby becomes the principal character. It was taken back to the hospital. Nobody wanted it there. It was taken to the Elizabeth Street Police Station and "booked" as a foundling. Police took it to the foundling asylum. They could not find the mother to punish her for abandonment.

IT SAYS IN a book with which you are familiar:

"Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones; for I say unto you, that in Heaven their angels do always behold the face of My Father which is in Heaven."

When a baby, not wanted, goes to a foundling asylum, it usually does not live long, and the "angel" of that small baby may soon "behold the face of My Father, which is in Heaven."

It might say, on arriving:

"I'm not here to complain. I simply represent the civilization that produced me. If I had been a Chow puppy, anybody would have been glad to take care of me."

IN NEW YORK, so-called "reds," interested in Communistic ideas, confess sorrowfully that Communism in America "has failed to develop into a revolutionary mass party of the proletariat."

That condition, which is sad for the "reds," may continue indefinitely. It is hard to have a Communistic proletarian "mass party" when the proletariat doesn't even know that it is a proletariat.

In fact it wouldn't thank you to apply the word proletarian to its members and then explain it as "the lowest class in society, good for nothing but hard work." Many of the "mass" in this country still believe in opportunity, and corner lots.

YOUR NEWSPAPER'S front page and inside pages this morning will supply news of kidnapings, news of shootings. Each day it is the same.

In Chicago gangsters are alleged to have named in advance well-known citizens that they propose to kidnap, and sooner or later, even this indifferent country will have to do something about the kidnaping industry.

From Altamont, Kansas, there comes a slight variation in the usual bank robbery news. Isaac McCarthy, cashier of the small Labette County bank, filled a robber with a rifle while the robber held McCarthy's wife in front of him as a shield. He did not know how good a shot McCarthy was. McCarthy also shot down a second robber with a shot gun.

SCIENTISTS tell us that atomic energy locked up in a small glass of water would drive the biggest steamship across the Atlantic Ocean. If men ever harness that power, European travel will be cheap.

Moses could not have believed that some day British airplanes would fly back and forth in a few hours over territory through which he wandered for forty years. And the old "forty-niners" would have laughed had you predicted that in 1933 a man would fly from the Pacific to the Atlantic in eleven hours, over all the plains, prairies and mountains across which they toiled for months.

RESOURCEFUL man can usually find something to do. The Peerless Motor Car Company, which has not been making automobiles for more than a year, will manufacture beer and ale, using the methods and the name of "Carling's," one of Canada's most successful breweries.

Their coming here will be

STEEL CODE PROVIDES PAY RAISE

Lamont Submits Plan For Spreading Work

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(AP.)—The steel industry today filed with the recovery administration a code of fair competition to increase wages and spread employment through a major portion of this fundamental trade.

Robert P. Lamont, head of the Iron and Steel Institute, brought the agreement to Hugh S. Johnson, industrial administrator.

It was definitely understood that well in excess of 90 per cent of the steel production of the country was represented in the agreemnt. Its actual terms were not disclosed, but Johnson and Lamont imediately began a scrutiny of the important document.

The administration has regarded steel as one of the most vital industries in the movement to increase the purchasing power of working men.

Together with codes from oil and lumber, the filing of the steel code will have put in the hands of Johnson work-spreading agreements for three of the basic raw material industries of the country.

An early hearing for steel is in prospect.

DERN PRAISES 'NEW DEAL' HERE

George H. Dern, Secretary of War, came to Pittsburgh today to get behind the "Franklin D. Roosevelt" and push the newest boat into the federal government's activities under the Inland Waterways Corporation.

The boat was chirstened by Mrs. Dern, smiling home-person.

But Secretary Dern was as interested in pushing the idea of President Roosevelt's National Recovery Act.

HOPE OF U. S.

Between bites of breakfast, he spoke in glowing terms of its possibilities and necessities. He said:

"It's the hope of the country. It means the organization of industry, with dangerous competion eliminated.

"It doesn't affect the War Department directly. But indirectly it affects everything in the nation and will be the

Nocturnal Swimmers Seized at Park Pool

The folks who live in the vicinity of Olympia Park have been kept awake nights by boys swimming in the park pool after hours. They complained to police and early today five were arrested by radio police from the Mt. Washington Police Station.

They were John Connelly, 16, of 458 Wyola street; George Kenny, 16, of 208 Sweetbrier street, and William Caldwell, 16, of 310 Sweetbrier street. Two others were turned over to their parents.

34 Safe, Captain Goes Down With His Burning Ship

NEW YORK, July 15.—(AP.)—Capt. F. L. Sears went down with his burning ship, the tanker Cities Service Petrol, in the Atlantic off Wilmington, N. C., last night, while two other American merchant ships stood by and rescued 34 members of the crew.

Two other men went down with Capt. Sears. They were reported killed aboard before the ship sank. One was an engine wiper, George Binninnger. The name of the other was not immediately available.

The rescue ships were the tanker Gulf Gem and the steamer Tri-Mountain. The Gulf Gem saved 24 members of the Petrol crew and the Tri-Mountain 10.

Immediately after the Petrol sank, enveloped in flames with Capt. Sears alive and at his post, the Gulf Gem turned off her course and put in with the survivors, some of which were injured, at Charleston, S. C. It was presumed the Tri-Mountain accompanied her.

Wireless reports received by the Radio Marine Corporation painted the outlines of the grim sea picture in sketchy details.

The Gulf Gem message:

"Burning tanker, Cities Service Petrol, sank stern first at 11:30 p. m. just after eight men were taken off in heavy sea by boat crew of Gulf Gem.

"Captain refused to leave his burning ship and two other men were killed aboard."

Wheat Soars In Wild Buying

CHICAGO, July 15.—(AP.)—Wheat shot up 6 cents a bushel today to a top of $1.23 within a half hour after the Board of Trade opened. The main incentive was reports from market experts that the Canadian crop was damaged much more than previous surveys had indicated.

The golden grain opened about 2 cents above yesterday's close. Excited buying by shorts soon made quotations leap almost a cent at a time. May option hit $1.23¼. A year ago wheat sold around an average of 48 cents.

Rockefeller Pays Only Half of Taxes

NORTH TARRYTOWN, N. Y., July 15.—(AP.)—A check for $10,000 has been received by the town tax collector from John D. Rockefeller, representing half of the taxes due on that part of the estate in Pocantico Hills that lies in North Tarrytown.

Heretofore Rockefeller always has paid his taxes in full in one payment, and no explanation was forthcoming for the half payment this time. Rockefeller is the biggest taxpayer within the incorporated limits of North Tarrytown.

Butler Court Halts Bank Security Sale

BUTLER, Pa., July 14.—(INS.)—Demand claims against the closed Millerstown Deposit Bank in Chicora have been temporarily postponed by order of Judge Thomas W. Watson, of the Butler County Court.

Receivers for the closed Chicora institution claimed that the sale of collateral for notes totaling $63,500 held by two Pittsburgh banks at present prices would work a hardship on depositors and other creditors.

BEAVER BARS TROLLEYS IN FEUD

Interurban Railways Cars Ordered From Street

BEAVER, Pa., July 15.—Police today halted operation through Beaver of interurban cars of the Steubenville, East Liverpool and Beaver Valley Traction Company.

A barricade was erected at the Vanport-Beaver borough line on instructions of Beaver Council.

A permit which the Pennsylvania Public Service Commission had issued to the company to use lines of the Beaver Valley Traction Company, now in the hands of a receiver, expired last midnight.

The Steubenville company made no effort to operate cars through Beaver today, pending an attempt to reach an agreement with borough authorities for an extension of franchise.

Passengers were conveyed by buses to and from the Vanport line, a mile and a half from the terminus at the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad station.

According to Burgess D. A. Moore, operation of the interurban cars may be permitted later until the state Highway Department begins work of building a new highway on Third street, occupied by the car tracks, part of state route 68, possibly September 1. Then the tracks will be torn up.

The Beaver Valley Traction Company discontinued local service in Beaver months ago.

NAILS IN 'BOMB' SENT BARBER

A fake bomb, apparently intended to frighten a cut-rate barber, was found today in the vestibule of 1336 West North avenue.

August Barbarine, whose barber shop at 905 Manhattan street, nearby, was stoned a month ago, occupies the second floor of the North avenue address.

Mrs. Mary A. Risch, owner, who occupies the first floor, found a heavy package and notified police. Plainclothesmen Harary Scott and Leroy Sullens opened the package and found five pounds of nails wrapped in newspapers.

Barbarine believes someone is trying to scare him into raising his prices. He has made no change since before windows in his shop were broken, he said.

Lindberghs to Stay Week in Labrador

CARTWRIGHT, Labrador, July 15. — (INS.) — Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh today settled down for a week's stay in this northern outpost, which they will use as a base for several survey flights along the coast before resuming their Greenland flight.

With Mrs. Lindbergh acting as radio operator, the couple arrived here last night after a two-stage journey from St. John's, Newfoundland.

Balbo on Final Leg Of Flight to Chicago

Armada Hops From Montreal for World's Fair

MONTREAL, July 15.—(INS.)—The flying armada from faraway Italy, under Gen. Italo Balbo, took off from here today for Chicago on the final triumphant leg of their 6,100-mile mass flight.

The black ship of Gen. Balbo, leading the vari-colored 24 seaplanes, rose gracefully from the waters of the St. Lawrence River at 11:15 a. m. Pittsburgh time).

The others, at intervals of several minutes, followed their commander into the air falling into sextet formations. Their motors roared away into the west.

U. S. ARMY ESCORT

Augusto Rosso, Italian ambassador to the United States, accompanied Gen. Balbo in his plane.

A 20-mile-an-hour breeze swept the river as the seaplanes in slow rotation took off. The haze which had previously misted the river disappeared.

Conditions along the 870-mile route were reported as favorable.

The aerocade was expected to run into some rain in the region of Detroit where an escort squadron of 40 United States Army planes were to join it.

Gen. Balbo was escorted to the pier by a squad of provincial police. He announced the armada would fly by way of Toronto, Buffalo, Toledo to Chicago.

As plane followed plane into the air, a crowd of at least 50,000 persons lining the banks cheered a bon voyage and happy landing. River craft tooted and factory whistles were tied down.

Many in the crowd had spent the night at the airport. They slept in the grass with rugs or blankets for covering. Many families spent the night sleeping in parked cars.

The crews of the planes, dressed neatly in their steel blue uniforms, were ferried out to their ships from the wharfs.

They climbed into their huge flying boats swinging at their moorings in the sun.

The signal was given by Gen. Balbo and motors and propellers began turning.

WORLD FLIER AIMS PLANE AT BERLIN

Lithuanian Fliers Defy U. S. Officials in Ocean Takeoff

BULLETIN.

NEW GERMANY, Nova Scotia, July 15.—(AP.)—A large airplane, believed to be that of Wiley Post, flew high over this town at 8:20 a. m., eastern standard time (9:20 a. m., Pittsburgh time), today, heading eastward.

JT. JOHN, N. B., July 15.—(INS.)—Considerable fog threatening possible showers lay along the coast of the maritime provinces, making flying conditions unfavorable for Wiley Post and two Lithuanian aviators who left New York on trans-Atlantic hops today.

The world airways were busy again today, with two ocean flights in progress and the Italian armada about to complete its journey to Chicago.

Wiley Post hopped off at an early hour on a world solo flight, his first destination Berlin. He was reported over the sea, braving fog.

Post's take-off was followed shortly by that of two Lithuanian fliers, Darius and Girenas, of Chicago, who aim at Kaunas, Lithuania.

Gen. Balbo's squadron is en route to Chicago on the final leg of its 6,100-mile flight to United States.

Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh had settled down at Cartwright, Labrador, before resuming their Greenland flight.

NEW YORK, July 15.—(AP.)—Wiley Post, 35-year-old Oklahoma flier, took off from Floyd Bennett Field at 4:10 a. m., eastern standard time (5:10 a. m., Pittsburgh time), and headed out over the Atlantic Ocean on his attempt to fly alone around the world.

He was flying the white and purple Lockheed monoplane Winnie Mae, in which he and Harold Gatty made their 'round-the-world record of 8 days 15 hours 51 minutes in 1931. This time, he hopes to do it faster. He shouted:

"I'll be back as quick as possible."

Only two bad spots of weather were reported ahead of him on the first leg of his trip, the 3,900 miles to Berlin. There was a low pressure area off the Atlantic coast near New York, which he intended to fly around, and rain off the coast of Ireland, which he plans to fly through.

HEADS INTO SUNRISE

The heavily loaded Winnie Mae ran the length of the runway before she got into the air. Post bounced the ship once trying to get it off the ground, but when it finally did rise he gained altitude rapidly and headed straight into a clear red sunrise.

He expected the Winnie Mae's cruising speed of 170 miles an hour to be increased at least 25

NORTHRUP, BLAMING PINCHOT AIDE FOR STRIKES, RESIGNS

QUITS GOVERNOR HURLING BLAST AT ASSISTANT

Labor Industry Chief Says Woman Deputy Foments Strife

HARRISBURG, July 15.—(AP.)—Protesting he was not permitted an impartial administration of the post, Dr. A. M. Northrup, of Wilkes-Barre, has resigned as State Secretary of Labor and Industry, thereby creating the first breach in Gov. Pinchot's cabinet.

In a sensational climax to Pennsylvania's troubled industrial situation, Dr. Northrup tendered his resignation late yesterday in a letter to the Governor charging that Deputy Secretary Charlotte E. Carr had been fomenting strikes.

Capitol Hill sources reported Miss Carr may be named to succeed Northrup, but Gov. Pinchot declined to discuss this. Such an appointment would mark the first time for a woman to hold the post.

'NO TIME FOR STRIKES'

Dr. Northrup said in his letter that strikes increased more than 400 per cent in Pennsylvania in the second quarter of 1933 and placed the responsibility largely on the shoulders of Miss Carr.

Northrup wrote:

"After careful study, I do not believe this is the time to foment strikes when the workingman is desperately in need of employment and the employer is so seriously handicapped by industrial conditions."

Gov. Pinchot accepted the resignation, but said "the charge that any employe of the Department of Labor and Industry has been fomenting strikes is ridiculous."

Appointed to the post in January, 1931, Dr. Northrup's resignation came in the midst of widespread strikes and industrial unrest.

Several of the workmen tried to take advantage of the raise yesterday, but were cuffed and sent in the opposite direction of the factory doors.

Before the strike it is reported the men were making from 25 to 50 cents an hour, while the girls made from 14 to 18 cents an hour.

PARLEY TO KILL TARIFF TRUCE

By EDWARD L. DEUSS
International News Service.

LONDON, July 14.—The World Economic Conference, moving toward adjournment within a fortnight, today admitted failure on another important issue.

Its economic sub-committee agreed that in its final report to the steering committee of the conference, July 26, a declaration will be made that the tariff truce proposed by the United States is out of the question.

The sub-committee will report failure to reach an agreement not only on the tariff issue but upon all problems concerning trade restrictions—in other words that it has been unable to make any progress at all.

means of lifting the country out of many of its difficulties."

He was asked:

"But is industry co-operating? Are the industries holding back and refusing to go along?"

"The idea is that the President will force those who will not co-operate, all those little industries, to go along."

"But how about the big ones?"

"They'll be brought linto line, too."

TO MAKE CRUISE

Secretary Dern spoke of his interest in Pittsburgh's industries, explaining that from the viewpoint of national defense, the department he heads keeps constantly in mind the necessity of industrial mobilization. He declared that so far, the War Department has not let any bids for work under the public works act, adding:

"We haven't come to it yet."

He and Mrs. Dern and Maj. Gen. T. Q. Ashburn, head of the Inland Waterways Corporation—a government corporation which he founded to promote inland waterway transportation—will be honor guests on the first cruise of the "Franklin D. Roosevelt," built by the Midland Barge Company. It is a new towboat—with the latest developments in river steamers included on it.

SEES RIVER-RAIL PACT

Gen. Ashburn announced that he had projected a river-rail agreement, which, if consummated, will mean the end of the battle of the two types of transportation. He said:

"I had a conference in St. Louis a few days ago with L. A. Downs, president of the Illinois Central Railroad, and L. W. Baldwin, president of the Missouri Pacific Railroad.

"They agreed to try to line up the railroads to stop rate cutting between the roads and steamboats."

Gen. Ashburn with John Schuyler Casey, president of the Midland Barge Company, builders of the Franklin D. Roosevelt, which they are helping launch today, said the president was not the first Roosevelt associated with the Ohio or Mississippi rivers.

An ancestral cousin of the President's, Nicholas J. Roosevelt, who lived from 1767 to 1854, built and sailed the first steamer on the Ohio and Mississippi. It was built in Pittsburgh.

Moley's Plane, 'Phone Bills Cause Dispute

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(AP.)—Who will pay for an airplane ride he never took and $1,200 worth of Prof. Raymond Moley's telephone calls during his recent dash to the London economic conference have given economists a new financial problem to figure out.

It developed upon Prof. Moley's return today that a plane was ordered to take him from his ship at Ireland to London, but he found the ship would get there first, so he didn't fly. A $500 bill for this and the telephone costs were sent to the American embassy in London.

The embassy decided the professor was not a member of the American delegation and shunted the bills to Washington.

Reaching the State Department, Prof. Moley said the bills hadn't arrived but when they came they would be taken care of. If the airplane bill was not okayed, he indicated, he would pay it himself. The telephone calls he thought fair and necessary.

PIG STY REPORT PAY ORDERED

The County Commissioners must pay a reasonable amount to three attorneys who served as a board of visitors to investigate the Allegheny County home at Woodville in 1931, under an opinion handed down by Judge Joseph Stadtfeld, in Superior Court, now sitting in Philadelphia.

After the visitors, Attorneys G. M. McDonald, E. H. Wicks and Paul E. Hutchinson, filed a report emphasizing the palatial pig sty at the poor farm, Judge James H. Gray accepted it and directed them to file a taxpayers' suit. He ordered that they be paid $1,500 each for their past services and as a fee for carrying on the suit.

The Commissioners refused to pay, and a mandamus was brought against the Commissioners. Judge William H. McNaugher decided there was no authority compelling the Commissioners to pay the visitors. It was on an appeal from this ruling that Judge Stadtfeld ruled.

Repair of the county's 1,100 voting machines will be finished on scheduled time, August 1, the Commissioners were informed yesterday when they visited the plant of the Thomas Spacing Machine Company at Glenshaw.

Commissioner W. D. Mansfield and Director William T. Rees, of the Department of Elections, expressed satisfaction with the progress of the work. Commissioner C. C. McGovern also made the inspection trip.

FEDERAL ORDER TO INCREASE PAY NEAR

Roosevelt May Issue Wages and Hours Decree Tomorrow

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(AP.)—Tomorrow aboard President Roosevelt's yacht somewhere on the Potomac River may be shaped a fateful decision to call upon all American business to raise wages and cut working hours right away.

Hugh S. Johnson, boss of the recovery administration, who for days has been studying this idea for obtaining the quick boost in the purchasing power of the masses, will fly down and report to the President on its possibilities.

EVERY BUSINESS

The plan would involve having every line of business from the big factory down to the corner store agree willingly and without waiting for adoption of a code of fair competition, the vehicle provided by law to spread employment, boost wages and give industry self regulation.

Johnson admits some concern about the "white collar" man. Agreements among industries to spread work and lift pay are helping the ordinary laborer, he finds, but most of the trade codes do little for the big middle class.

He holds that a general increase by all American business would reach this group, and thereby tremendously increase purchasing power.

Meanwhile, there have been signs that the ultimate impulse to put the industrial recovery plan across may come from business itself.

OFFICIALS HOPEFUL

In an outwardly spontaneous move a few industries already have asked administration sanction for wage and hour limits without waiting for codes to go into force. There has been no assurance that the movement has spread, but Roosevelt's lieutenants who have been working night and day to stir industry into motion, show hope.

Besides the rayon and silk industries, which are asking permission to come under the terms like those of the cotton code, which goes into effect on Monday, the cement industry came forward yesterday with a request for presidential approval of a 36-hour week, minimum wage plan.

Many other industries are finishing up codes.

ROOSEVELT TO SPEED WORK

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(INS.)—President Roosevelt has decided to make prompt use of the $3,300,000,000 public works bond issue to put more than 1,000,000 men back to work.

This was disclosed officially today after the first announcement of projects by the public works administration gave rise to rumors that the public works program would be delayed. The initial allotment was only $115,000,000.

The President, it was disclosed, believes that full use of the huge public works fund will go far toward providing the purchasing power necesary to keep industry on the upswing.

Approval of projects costing more than a half billion dollars is expected within the next week. Steps to this end were taken today by the cabinet board which met with Secretary of Interior Ickes, public works administrator, to canvass additional proposed federal projects.

ery Act last night after an intensive 48-hour session.

This code and one drafted last week by a southern group will be compared at a conference in Washington Monday afternoon when an effort will be made to reconcile whatever differences may be found to exist and draw up a single code for immediate submission to the federal administration.

Both the northern code completed last night and the southern code provide minimum wages and maximum working weeks and meet the other requirements which the administration has set forth. The details of the provisions, however, are being withheld until after the Washington conference.

SEPARATE CODES

No effort will be made to reconcile the North-South code expected from the Washington meeting with the code already submitted to the administration by union operators.

The combined North-South groups, however, represent approximately 70 per cent of the total bituminous production in this country, it was said.

The northern group, which organized itself yesterday under the name of the Northern Coal Control Association, represents four large producing areas—Pennsylvania, Northern West Virginia, Maryland and Eastern Ohio. The Southern group—the Smokeless and Appalachian Coal Association—represents operators in Southern West Virginia, Eastern Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia.

The Northern Coal Control Association was composed of five operators' organizations represented at the conference. J. D. A. Morrow, of Pittsburgh, president of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, who directed the meeting and was made temporary chairman of the association, said the organization represented roughly three-fourths of all the producers in the area.

PROVISIONS WITHHELD

Morrow declined to comment not only on the provisions of the northern code, but also on the prospects of harmonizing his with the southern code. He pointed out, however, that if an agreement is reached on the basic provisions the groups could proceed to draft a single code and make whatever discriminations might prove necessary between the northern and southern fields.

The Northern Coal Control Association is to be a permanent trade organization, with officers and directors elected later. Meanwhile, Morrow was made temporary chairman and Walter A. Jones, of Altoona, Pa., temporary secretary. Jones is secretary of the Eastern Bituminous Coal Association.

REQUEST VOICE IN COAL CODE

The American Wholesale Coal Association has asked to have a voice in any code formed under the National Recovery Act for the coal industry.

This group, composed of coal distributors from all parts of the country, has sent this request to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, Industrial Administrator, along with a pledge of their co-operation. The action was taken at a meeting in the William Penn Hotel yesterday.

The association elected these officers: President, C. S. B. Ward, of Pittsburgh; vice president Harold B. Wright, of Chicago; secretary, A. J. McCarthy, of Pittsburgh; treasurer, Clyde E. Speer, of Pittsburgh, and executive committee, Seth G. Morton, of Albany, N. Y.; George E. Copeland, of Boston; Charles W. Hendley, of Baltimore; Fred G. Legg, of Cincinati, and George D. Harsh, of Toledo.

STEEDLE POSTS BOND, LEAVES FINGERPRINTS

Bench Warrants Issued For 39 Indicted By Vote Probers

Dr. Joseph G. Steedle, Burgess of McKees Rocks and member of the State Legislature, one of the 39 persons indicted Thursday by the federal grand jury in the election probe, yesterday afternoon voluntarily surrendered to United States Marshal Walter W. Meyer. After being fingerprinted he was released under $5,000 bond pending trial.

Shortly before his appearance in the Federal Building, bench warrants were placed in the hands of the marshal for arrest of all named in the last batch of indictments. Earlier in the day John Fugassi, of the Board of Mercantile Appraisers, who was re-indicted, together with State Senator James J. Coyne and seven other political leaders, renewed his bond. The second indictment against the nine men supersedes the first indictment, returned June 28.

VOLUNTARILY SURRENDER

Others who furnished bonds and submitted to the fingerprinting were Harry Fink, private detective; Al Sherun, member of an election board in the Fourth Ward, and Wallace Ray, of McKees Rocks. Government attorneys were advised that some of the other defendants will voluntarily surrender.

While some of the defendants are busy laying plans for the furnishing of bonds, some of the government prosecutors and special investigators who figured prominently in the probe are laying plans to leave the city on vacations.

First Assistant United States Attorney James I. Marsh, one of the most active in the probe, will leave today for Canada.

TRIAL IN NOVEMBER

Within the next 10 days Special Prosecutor Earl F. Reed will start for Europe. E. J. Connelley, special agent of the United States Bureau of Investigation, who directed the preliminary investigation, will soon leave for Cincinnati, O., his regular post of duty.

The exodus of his first assistant and Special Prosecutor Reed will leave United States Attorney Louis E. Graham in whole charge of any legal matters relative to the probe that may arise in their absence. It is expected that all the 108 defendants in the election vote charges will be called for trial at the November term of court, unless a special session of court is set for October.

Malone Accuses Herron Of Misusing Aid Funds

Speaking before a Sixteenth Ward audience last night, James F. Malone, candidate for mayor, accused Mayor John H. Herron of using public funds for political purposes. Malone referred specifically to the employment of politicians and relatives and friends of politicians on the city's $300,000 work relief payroll.

Ward chairmen, he said, were made dictators of the expenditure of the fund, and well-paid jobs were going to persons Herron believed would be useful in his campaign for election. Malone said:

"The most arrogant misuse of public funds ever uncovered has been demonstrated to the people of Pittsburgh this week, when the Mayor dipped his hands into money provided by the citizens to relieve unemployment and practically turned the pot of gold over to his army of ward chairmen so that they could use the people's money for the purpose of building up their political fences in preparation for the coming campaign, by giving to their cohorts the money that should go to the needy.

"The people of Pittsburgh, last year, in a desire to help those not so fortunate as themselves, voted for a bond issue to relieve the unemployment situation. Thousands have been and still are unemployed but no move has ever been made by the Mayor or his associates to relieve this situation.

"The people of Pittsburgh did not vote for this money to be used as a campaign fund for the Coyne-Herron political organization. We have the sorry spectacle of the people's money being used for hiring of political lame ducks instead of being used to care for those suffering for years from unemployment.

"Herron's method is a malicious abuse of the appropriation as well as the people's confidence, for the purpose of building up a battered political machine."

Fourth Kidnap Note Revives Hopes; One Suspect Held

ALBANY, N. Y., July 15.—(AP.)—Khaki-uniformed National Guardsmen were ready today in a hundred hamlets and cities to throw their full force into the man-hunt for their kidnaped officer, Lieut. John J. O'Connell, Jr.

As the kidnaping entered its ninth day, fellow officers and guardsmen of the abducted nephew of Democratic boss "Big Dan" O'Connell and politically influential Lawyer Ed O'Connell awaited only the nod from Gov. Herbert H. Lehman.

Lieut. Col. Willis H. Donner, second in command of the guardsmen in this area, asserted that he and the soldiers were literally "raring to go over the top," but must wait for the command of the Governor.

After receipt yesterday of the fourth note from the kidnapers the O'Connells hopefully anticipated an early contact with the captors.

The latest note, signed by Young O'Connell, revived the family's hope. Mrs. Katherine O'Connell, under the care of a physician, was greatly eased by her son's note which indicated that he was well.

With a new list of nine intermediaries in the possession of the kidnapers, who previously rejected 22 other names, the O'Connells expected one of the latest suggested go-betweens would be acceptable.

While state police combed the Adirondack Mountains in the vicinity of Lake George in pursuit of tips contained in several letters written to District Attorney John T. Delaney, police at Buffalo retained in custody Guy Nolan, 40, who was arrested at the request of Delaney after he was informed that Nolan said he had some knowledge of the kidnaping.

WILLS MILLION TO SECRETARY

CHICAGO, July 15.—(AP.)—A fortune estimated at $1,000,000 is understood to be the legacy of Theodore G. Dickinson, Marquette Cement Company founder, to his secretary, Miss Bertha Evans, the Chicago Daily News reported today.

Dickinson, president of the company until his death, July 2, at his home in Libertyville, Ill., bequeathed blocks of stock to relatives and to Richard Moyle, superintendent of the firm. The will was filed for probate at Miami, Fla., several days ago.

Miss Evans was born at South Bend, Ind., and has been with the company 15 years. Miss Evans had no comment on the expected wealth.

Dickinson, 77 years old when he died, was divorced from Mrs. Mary Belville Dickinson in 1925, and by the terms of that decree gave her $500,000 in cash and securities. Their daughter, Rose, lives with her mother at St. Joseph, Mich.

The Daily News said it was understood Miss Evans would get the Dickinson homes in Miami and Libertyville. She is now living at the Libertyville mansion.

BRIDGE REPAIR JOB AWARDED

A contract for improvement of the Smithfield Street Bridge at a cost of $274,436.50 has been awarded to Walter S. Rae, it was announced today by Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang.

Lang has awarded to Frank Mannella & Sons a contract for construction of a sewer from Bair avenue to Dersham avenue for $3,938, and one for a sewer from Motor street to Surban avenue for $2,165.90. The Cyclone Fence Company received a contract to build a wire fence and walls in the Arlington playground for $2,763.34.

Common laborers employed by the contractors are to receive a minimum wage of 45 cents an hour.

Director Lang today was to award a contract for the raising of streets in the North Side flood district at a cost estimated by city engineers at $210,000. Lang said the low bid was submitted by the Parkview Construction Company, but he wished to make sure the company was qualified before he let the contract.

Park, Boulevard Jobs Up to Council

An ordinance authorizing several minor improvements in the city's parks and the planting of shrubs along Washington boulevard at a cost not to exceed $30,000 will come before Council next week. The money would be taken from the work relief bonds recently sold by the city.

Wiley Post Dares Fog On New World Flight

miles by a strong supporting west wind. The airplane has a top speed of 210 miles an hour.

Although Post flies alone, he will have the aid of a robot assistant pilot, a mechanical apparatus designed to keep the plane on its course and maintain its altitude and lateral stability without human aid. Post says it will permit him to doze when flying a straight course at high altitudes. An additional aid will be the secret new radio compass installed by the United States Army at Wright Field, Dayton, O.

TAKES 'FORTY WINKS'

Post arrived at the field about midnight, curled up on a cot, and slept preparatory to the takeoff. He was dressed in a new gray suit, was bareheaded, and wore a white patch over his left eye, the eye which he lost in 1926 on an oil well job. Two years ago, on his 'round-the-world trip, his glass eye irritated him so that he decided to abandon it this year.

He signed the pilots' register:

"Wiley Post. From—Floyd Bennett Field. Destination—same."

LITHUANIANS START

The monoplane Lithuanica, flown by two Lithuanian-Americans, took off from Floyd Bennett Field at 5:24 a. m., Eastern Standard time, (6:24 a. m. Pittsburgh time) today, on a 4,900-mile non-stop flight to Lithuania, in defiance of orders from Washington.

The fliers are Capt. Stephen Darius, 36, and Stanley Thomas Girenas, 37, both of Chicago and veterans of the American Army of the World War.

They went without passports and in the face of implicit instructions from the United States Department of Commerce that they were not to make the flight.

They set out across the Atlantic just one hour and 14 minutes behind Wiley Post.

Darius and Girenas had been waiting at Floyd Bennett Field ready to start their flight, since May 7. During that time they argued with the Department of Commerce which refused to give them clearance papers. They got off the ground by a ruse, this morning, telling field authorities they wanted to make a load test.

FIGHT OVER CABLE COSTS

Darius and Girenas have been in altercation with official Washington about permits to fly over countries between America and Lithuania. The argument had centered about the question of who should pay $100 for cost of cables to the countries in question.

The big orange and silver Bellanca monoplane was loaded to capacity with 779 gallons of gasoline, 135 of which were in five-gallon cans, and 25 gallons of oil.

Most of the crowd which had seen Post off gathered around the Lithuanica at the take-off. The last to bid them goodbye was Paul Zadeikis, counsul-general of Lithuania. He shook their hands and wished them godspeed.

The fliers did not sign the register at the field, and Maj. J. Nelson, manager of the field, was not informed that they were hopping the Atlantic.

Unemployment Doctor Finds Chronic Cases

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

One thing we would like to ask about the unemployment figures.

They're probably correct. But how many men are there who don't want to work?

How many men are there who never did work?

We claim that America always had several million gentlemen who wouldn't lift a hand to scratch their chins.

They're the boys whose mothers take in wasing, whose wives support the children and who hang around the depot watching the trains go by.

We've read the Constitution and there's nothing in it against well-organized, sedate and sincere laziness.

So, how about revising those figures and crossing off the lads whose industry is loafing?

ACCUSED JUDGE QUITS BENCH

HARRISBURG, July 15.—(AP.)—Eighteen hours after he received the verdict of the Philadelphia Bar Association's committee of censors on charges against him, Judge Thomas J. Regan, of the Philadelphia Municipal Court, handed his resignation to Gov. Pinchot.

The executive, who appointed him on June 20, said Regan had done "the manly thing," and accepted the resignation.

Regan told the Governor he felt he should "take this course in justice to you, the friends who indorsed me for appointment to the judicial post and also to put myself in a position to defend myself against allegations which have been made against me."

The charges involve a complaint filed by a client against Regan regarding a fee.

PITTSBURGHERS HELD IN STICKUP

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., July 15.—(AP.)—Two Pittsburgh men are under arrest in connection with a holdup in which $1,000 was taken at the point of guns from six men in a downtown office.

Police said the office was headquarters for Clarksburg's "numbers racket."

Michael Tarbor, 32, 1162 Brooklyn avenue, Pittsburgh, and Harry Sandler, 25, 1701 Center avenue, were arrested. Tarbor was nabbed at Fairmont by state troopers and is to be brought here today.

Three bandits are said to have entered an upstairs office, lined Emmett Randolph against a wall and relieved him of $500. Five others in the room lost all the cash they had, they told police.

YALE SCIENTIST HANGS SELF

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 15.—(AP.)—Overwork and ill health were blamed today for the suicide of Prof. Raymond P. Dougherty, noted Yale Orientalist, who hanged himself in a blueberry thicket.

The man who spent years studying the mysteries of the ancient East was missing 30 hours before a Negro youth, picking berries, found his body swinging from a hickory tree near his residence in Hamden, a suburb.

The discovery ended an intensive search. He left home Thursday, saying he was going for a walk.

Born in Lebanon, Pa., the Orientalist had a varied career before coming to Yale, including four years' service as American Vice Consul at Freetown, Sierra Leone, West Africa, while principle of the Albert Academy, and United Brethren Church Mission School in that place.

He was graduated from Lebanon Valley College, Annville, Pa.; Bonebrake Theological Seminary, Dayton, O., and Yale.

HIKER SEIZES AUTO IN FIGHT

A hitch-hiker who "thumbed" a ride from Ambridge to Pittsburgh early today engaged in a fight with W. D. Haven, 33, of East Liverpool and, according to Haven, made off with his auto. Haven, en route to Forward avenue, said he was attacked by the hitch-hiker at Second avenue and Bates street.

Kidnap Guard Posted On Rich Chicagoans

Factor Reveals List Of Half Hundred 'Prospects'

CHICAGO, July 15.—(AP.)—Nearly half a hundred wealthy Chicago residents today were reported under guard and state troopers and city police were patrolling their homes to prevent their abduction by kidnapers.

The Chicago Tribune said the action was taken by the federal government after John Factor, the speculator, released recently by abductors after paying a $50,000 ransom, told of a book of prospects kept by his kidnapers and their business-like organization.

Although a full list of the men being guarded was not revealed by the government agents, the newspaper said the name of Arthur Cutten, grain trader, was included.

Another was John Hertz, sportsman, who said the day and night guard at his home was placed there at the request of the government. Hertz said he did not ask for the guards and had never received threats, but was willing to co-operate.

Still working on the theory that the Touhy gang was responsible for the Factor kidnaping, the newspaper said authorities were scouring Cook County for five men believed to be associated with the hoodlums.

The Tribune said the federal agents considered as important Factor's imprisonment in a basement the night of his abduction and his statement that his captors told him "I was the first man to be held in that basement, and that I would not be the last."

Factor said one of the men told him:

"This is our business and it is a good one. We have it down to a science and are making good money. The papers never hear of most of our 'snatches' because we impress them (the victims) it isn't healthy to talk."

Pittsburgher Faces Kidnaping Charge

CINCINNATI, O., July 15.—(AP.)—Upon completion today of a six-months jail term for transporting a stolen automobile, M. M. McCreight, 50, of Pittsburgh, was turned over to officers from Carlisle, Pa., where he faces charges of robbery, automobile theft and kidnaping.

Frederick Templeton, District Attorney of Cumberland County, Pa., said McCreight and Harold Stringley, Wilmington, O., are charged with binding Robert Brown, automobile dealer, at Carlisle, and taking his watch and car.

BULLETS ROUT HOUSEBREAKER

W. C. Long, of 234 Bellefield avenue, fired several shots at a man who attempted to break into his home early today, according to police report.

Hearing a noise at the back door, Long seized a revolver and fired as the prowler fled through the yard. Long believed one shot hit the man.

Two Negroes robbed Eugene Brashear, 1844 Center avenue, of $5.59 and a suitcase containing several pairs of trousers and a jacket, in Federal street, near Plush way, early today. Brashear told police one of the thugs held a knife against his ribs while the other took his cash and bag.

RIOT AT GAME, DOZEN HURT

A riot which climaxed a mush-ball game between a team from Hazelwood and one from the Strip, in a lot in Kansas street, near Second avenue, resulted in injury to a dozen players and spectators last night.

The combatants vanished before the arrival of five radio scout cars and two patrol autos.

LUER'S FRIENDS GET GOOD NEWS

ALTON, Ill., July 15.—(AP.)—Agents negotiating for release of August Luer, 77-year-old banker, kidnaped five days ago, announced today "good news" had been received.

Asked if this meant the agents had received a ransom note containing a message from the aged banker, they replied, "That's a good suggestion," but refused to amplify the statement.

Last night unexplained trips were made in the motor car of the missing man by relatives, giving rise to rumors that his release was near.

Indications were that Lawrence Keller, Jr., and Orville S. Catt, the official negotiators, had not made a personal contact with the abductors.

WOMAN GIVEN KIDNAP TERM

NEW YORK, July 15.—(AP.)—A woman was sentenced yesterday to an indeterminate term of six months to three years in the penitentiary on her recent plea of guilty to attempt blackmail in a kidnaping plot.

In passing sentence, Judge Otto A. Rosalsky brushed aside a plea for clemency by the complainant and declared he would not be influenced by sentiment because the prisoner, Mrs. Marion Harris, 42, was a woman.

Until her arrest last March, Mrs. Harris was employed by Louis Marx, a toy manufacturer, and looked after his two children, Barbara, three and one-half years old, and Louis, Jr., 2.

Mrs. Harris sent an anonymous letter to her employer March 17 last, threatening to kidnap one of the children unless she received $20,000.

Political Leader Beaten by Gang

A complaint of Albert Keagley, Republican county committeeman of Scott Township and former justice of the peace, that he was beaten by a constable and a gang of hoodlums, was being investigated today by County Detective Frank Ritz.

Keagley said a group of loafers had insulted his wife and that he was beaten after he complained.

The fracas, according to Keagley, took place in front of a wholesale beer store, 130 Carothers street, Glendale. Keagley and his wife live above the store.

Pioneer Society Leaders Visit Historic Places

The Thaws, the Thompsons and the Mellons have been living here more or less since 1800. Yesterday members of these famous families decided to see what Western Pennsylvania looks like.

Benjamin Thaw, his sister, Mrs. William Reed Thompson, and Thomas Mellon, II., brother of W. L. Mellon and nephew of former Ambassador Andrew W. Mellon, were among a party of 60 participating in the second annual historial tour from Pittsburgh to Morgantown, W. Va., conducted by the Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania and the University of Pittsburgh. The tour will end tonight.

The motorcade first visited St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Woodville, the first Episcopal church west of the Allegheny mountains.

Next the party inspected the Presley Neville House, build in 1785 by Col. Presley Neville before the Whisky Insurrection and used as a refuge at that time by the women of the Gen. John Neville household on Bower Hill.

The trip resumed at Canonsburg this morning. The caravan was to visit points of interest such as the Hill Church, Col. George Morgan's place at Morganza, the log college in Canonsburg, the ruins of the David Reed house, scene of an interesting episode in Washington's travels, northwest of Venice, and the old Manchester house beyond West Middletown.

Returning to Washington the party was to proceed to Waynesburgh by way of Amity.

Hearing on Roosevelt Divorce to Be Secret

MINDEN, Nev., July 15.—(Universal.)—Although Elliott Roosevelt, son of the President, filed suit yesterday for a divorce on grounds of extreme mental cruelty, an uncontested decree is expected to be granted to his wife.

If a cross-complaint signed in Philadelphia by Mrs. Roosevelt and sent west by air mail arrives in time, the hearing will be held Monday before Judge Clark Guild. It is understood she will have the custody of their 8-month-old son, William.

Although denied several times by both, reports persist that Roosevelt and Ruth Googins, attractive Fort Worth, Tex., society girl, plan to marry after he is free.

Details of the marital troubles of the young Roosevelts—he is 22 and she 21—are not for the public to know. The hearing will be a secret one, behind locked doors, and at its conclusion all testimony and evidence will be sealed.

The complaint filed yesterday was as brief as legally possible. It merely gave "extreme mental cruelty" as the reason a decree should be granted, but did not go further into the allegation.

GERMAN METHODISTS TO JOIN ENGLISH CONFERENCE

3 PITTSBURGH CHURCHES IN MERGER

Two of the three remaining conferences of German Methodists, founded in the United States in 1878 by William Nast, will merge with the English Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church at the last session of the Central German Conference to be held in Cincinnati the last of next month, it has been announced.

Three churches in the Pittsburgh district, the Ohio Street, Millbridge and North Braddock Methodist Churches, formerly members of the Central German Conference, will merge with the Pittsburgh Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The remainder of the 125 churches in the Central German Conference, with a total membership of nearly 10,000, will merge with nine other conferences mainly in Ohio, Illinois and Michigan.

The Northwest German Conference, with approximately the same number of churches and membership also will merge with English Conferences in their districts the last of August.

Of the 10 German Conferences which constituted German Methodism in the United States at the peak of its development, with a membership of nearly 65,000, only one will have preserved its identity by the end of 1933, the East German Conference consisting territorially of churches in Eastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York and Connecticut, and it too, will merge with English Conferences in 1934, it is anticipated.

Unlike the Evangelical denomination, founded in 1800 by Jacob Albrecht, a fervent young German Methodist convert, German Methodism never developed into a denomination. Its sole purpose was to bring the Methodist gospel message to Germans in America.

The Rev. Dr. William Nast, founder of the movement, was born in Stuttgart, Germany, in 1807 of Lutheran parentage, educated in the Theological Seminary of Blaubeuren and the University of Tuebingen. When his faith was undermined by the teachings of Baur and Strauss, he came to America and was converted at a Methodist altar in Danville, O., January, 1835. In the fall of the same year he was admitted on trial in the Ohio Annual Conference and was appointed the first German missionary of the Methodist Episcopal Church to Cincinnati, O.

In 12 years the German societies grew to 56 churches, with 75 preachers and 4,385 members.

Millvale Lutheran Pastor Installed

The Rev. Clarence Burtnett Daniels, recently called to the pastorate of Christ Lutheran Church, Millvale, has been installed. Assisting in the installation were the Rev. Dr. W. A. Logan of Turtle Creek, editor of the Lutheran Messiah, and all the pastors of Millvale churches.

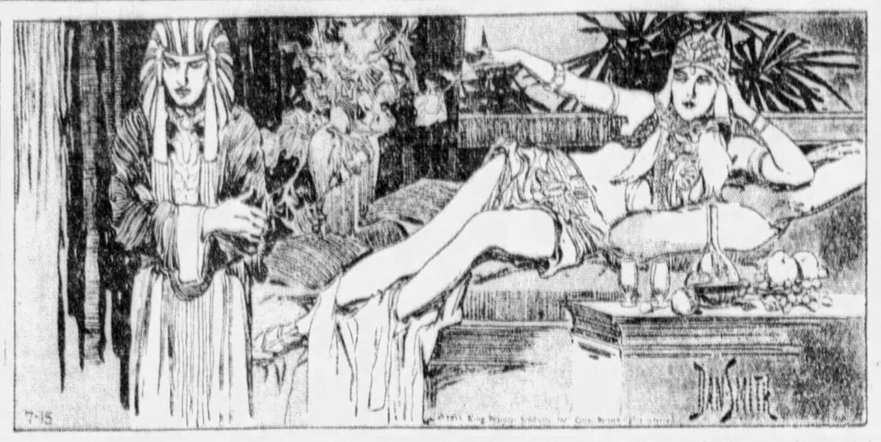
After throwing Joseph into the pit, his brothers went to Jacob and tried to prove he was killed by a wild animal by showing Joseph's coat, dipped in the blood of a kid.

What really happened was that the brothers had taken Joseph from the pit and sold him for 20 pieces of silver to a caravan of Ishmaelites on their way to Egypt.



When the Ishmaelites who had bought Joseph got to Egypt they sold him to Potiphar, the captain of Pharaoh's guard. Joseph was brought up in Potiphar's house and in the course of time he became overseer. Joseph was a comely youth and Potiphar's beautiful wife fell in love with him.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Manhattan Serenade

I view, with a sense of preferment,
The Summer I'm spending in town—
A palpably urban interment,
But pleasantly feathered with down.
For I've stored my assembled possessions,
And as far as Manhattan extends
I fashion my private transgressions
By sponging at large on my friends.

At my host's early-morning insistence,
I endeavor to relish the life.
He envies, he says, my existence,
And he leaves me alone with his wife.
Yet I find it no wearying task to Oblige my considerate host,
And by leaving before I am asked to
I'm still doing better than most.

Robert Newcomb.

Look Before You Lip

One of the better quips concerns the miner and his wife who hadn't been married very long. So when he arrived home from work one day and saw her at the washtub he tip-toed up, put his arms around her and then kissed her on the neck. Then he Cagney'd her one across the face as hard as he could.

"What's the idea of the sock?" demanded the indignant woman.

"For not turning around," was the retort proper," to see who it was!"

As If We Didn't Know

The item here recently that a New Yorker can't get more than 400 feet away from a fire alarm box at any time arouses J. F. Josefsberg to observe that it is impossible on Broadway to get more than four feet away at any time from a false alarm!

Imagine

You seldom see the name of Anna Sten in the papers. That's because Sam Goldwyn, the producer, wants to keep the public curious until he is ready to reveal her charms. But what we started to say was that Miss Sten has been in this country for 14 months waiting for a suitable story, getting her $1,000 per week without doing a bit of labor, etc.

The other day Mr. Goldwyn had reason enough to go mad. He sent for Miss Sten to be at the lot at 9:30 a. m. The girl who has been getting a grand per week doing nothing—arrived at 2:30 p. m.

In Other Words

And Phil Baker says he hates the thick silence in broadcasting studios, where it usually is so quiet—you can hear a pun flop.

Merciless Truth

Will Rogers says that all of us are ignorant—the only difference is that we are ignorant on different subjects.

Pro and Con

Intelligentsia poets
Are hungrily lean . . .
While Eddie Guest rides
In a smart limousine.
—Claire Avon Thomsom.

Lower Than Low

Fred Allen, who elevated himself from the role of juggler in the honky-tonks (when we "deuced it" on the same programs) to stardom, tells of the two smallies who were discussing one of Gandhi's fasts.

"Imagine that guy going all that time without food!" said one of them.

The other (who hadn't seen an orchestra leader face to face in months) replied:

"What was he doin'? Givin' an audition to see if he could live on the salaries they're payin' in vaudeville?"

Scallions

The show, "Strike Me Pink" which starred Jimmy Durante was forced to close recently (although movie bosses, demanded that enticing good crowds) because his Durante return to Hollywood to resume his contract. Dozens of chorus girls and others in the cast were needlessly thrown out of work before it was absolutely necessary.

Considering that Durante has been on the Coast several weeks—and the story written for him—won't be ready for at least another month!

In the meantime too many "Strike Me Pink" chorines are wearing out shoe leather looking for a job.

All of which strikes me punk!

Funny Film In Warner

By MARGARET RUSSELL

There's a chuckle a minute in "Best of Enemies" at the Warner this week. An old theme with new scenery, against a background of beer and music here and abroad; two grouchy fathers, whose offspring play together when they are kids and marry when they grow up.

Buddy Rogers' dad is Frank Morgan, a droll foil for the vituperous, sputtering Joseph Cawthorn, who is Marian Nixon's papa. Morgan, as William H. Hartman, an ostensible "dry," helps to put Gus Schneider's pre-prohibition beer garden out of business by aiding and abetting the Eighteenth Amendment.

Gus and his little girl go back to Germany and start a Hofbrau. Lena studies music at a famous conservatory where she meets Jimmy Hartman, her one-time playmate. Disguising his identity from the irate Gus, who hates the name of Hartman, Jimmy builds up the Hofbrau with the aid of musical friends, with a view to winning favor in the eyes of Lena's pa.

Everything goes along swell until William H. appears on the scene, and the life-long enemies take up their quarrel where they left it 12 years before. The two young 'uns take matters in their own hands and elope to America, while the flabbergasted papas follow hot-foot on the same boat. The inimical in-laws are brought together over a pitcher of foaming brew and make up their differences of 20 years over as many glasses of beer. But not for long. They're at it again at the fade-out.

Marian Nixon is a blonde this trip, dainty and shy beside the swashbuckling Rogers who dons the garb of working man for at least part of the film.

Besides the feature picture, there is a Gondola Journey on the Magic Carpet of Movieland to Venice. Bobby Jones will tell you how to improve your downswing and you can laugh with the kiddies over the Aesop Fable, "Runaway Blacky," the story of a black-sheep kid who had a nightmare.

War Pictured In Davis

By WILLIAM T. SCHOYER

Against the vast panorama of the World War, "Forgotten Men," film in the Davis and Sheridan Square, shows of soldiers of many nations in the enthusiasm of mobilization, the horror of battle, and the twisted forms of death.

On the sea, in the air, through shattered town and shell-rocked trench, the boys of 1914-18 enact the tragedy of our era in blurry, "official" film. The incidents are short-clipped. Death is undramatic. The whole action has the unhighlighted, casual quality of reality—which makes it doubly terrible.

Some short, grim shots of an fighting stand out above anything ever shown in Hollywood-manufactured productions. Ship after ship is shown blasted by torpedo explosion and going down. A few women and children are pictured dying in the air bombing of an English village. Big guns and their targets, infantry charging or crawling, shrouded with flame and smoke, up to the shock of hand-to-hand combat, fields cluttered with dead, lines of prisoners and wounded, make up most of the material.

A continuity lecture works the film up in chronological order from mobilization, through the big battles, to the armistice. Rather "mushy," there isn't enough of it to hurt the show.

Stump Dance Orchestra Next in Kennywood

Meredith Stump and his orchestra will play for the dancing in Kennywood Park next week. Two singers are featured. Kenneth Bailey will sing tenor ballads and Lyle Ashliman will sing comedy songs.

The swimming pool at Kennywood continues to draw its thousands weekly and is used daily for practice by swimming contestants. Several competitors in the last Olympics trained at Kennywood. Paul Gannon, Pittsburgh tenor, will be soloist with the Little Symphony Orchestra in free concerts tomorrow.

'Gold Diggers' Bill In Enright

"Gold Diggers of 1933," the Enright attraction, beginning today, will be the feature in that theater for a full week. Dick Powell and Ruby Keeler are at the head of a cast that includes Joan Blondell, Warren William, Aline MacMahon, Guy Kibbee and Ginger Rogers.

Grim Tragedy Of the War In Penn

By GEORGE SEIBEL

The directive genius of Richard Boleslavsky and the intensive acting of Walter Huston make an impressive tragedy out of "Storm at Daybreak" in the Penn Theater this week. It is a story of the great war, laid on the border of Serbia and Hungary, and beginning with the assassination of the Austrian Archduke. Then, "because somebody shot somebody, we must go and get shot," as one of the characters puts it.

Mr. Seibel

Walter Huston is the Serb mayor of an Hungarian town. Nils Asther is a gallant officer in the Magyar army. Kay Francis is the beautiful wife of the mayor, who falls in love, against her will, with the handsome soldier.

The triangle is drawn without theatrical tricks, though it culminates in a terrific theatrical climax when Huston does some very tall acting as he drives through a storm to suicide over a precipice, taking with him the Serbian military chief who was going to have the Hungarian officer shot. And so Kay and Nils are shown in a final fadeout mourning the sacrificial Walter in a very picturesque graveyard with crosses presumably Greek Orthodox.

It is really a picture with mighty dramatic moments, and backgrounds magnificently conceived. The village scenes are especially colorful, the animals perform with poetic savoir-faire, and the incidental music (plenty of it) has gypsy abandon. Even the glimpses of the war do not seem shoddy despite some sentimental conjunctions. See this picture for Boleslavsky's direction and Huston's tragic climaxes!

"Flip" has terrifying experiences with a robot of Technocracy in the comic cartoon, while "Our Gang" go through equally thrilling adventures with a Wild Man of Borneo.

Yes, Indeed, the Doctor's In!

Miss Bennett Tough In Stanley

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Constance Bennett attempts to do a Mae West in "Bed of Roses," sophisticated comedy that opened yesterday in the Stanley. Revealing that the principal similarity is that Constance is a blonde, too. Perhaps not quite as decided as Mae, but still a blonde. On the other hand there is Pert Kelton, who is no blonde at all, but who can be just as pert as they make 'em when it comes to that insouciant manner, unstudied indifference, hip-swinging swagger, meaningful quips and immobile expression that really is expressive.

If you take it from this that Miss Kelton kind of runs away with the show, you get an inkling, at least, of the meaning. Perhaps all of this "society stuff" that Miss Bennett has been doing for the screen has palled upon her, and she wanted to be tough for a change. Well, it's not wholly a failure nor wholly a success. In other words, Mae West's notoriety remains secure.

In "Bed of Roses" Constance and Pert are a couple of careless girls. One meets them being discharged from a reform school of the prison type. The nice words of advice given by the lady superintendent, opening the barred doors for them, are lost on Connie and her pal. So on a boat that is taking them away from there Connie lifts a leather (wallet to you honest people) and when officers come to find it she jumps overboard, and is supposed to have drowned. Not so, good people because Joel McCrea, barge captain, picks her up. Next morning she is gone, and with her, some of Joel's cash.

Isn't that a swell way to begin a romance? Well, that's just how it begins, but before the wedding bells ring our heroine lives in an apartment furnished by John Halliday. And you may be sure that Mr. Halliday objects when he learns that she wants to give up her "bed of roses" for cat-fish and tarpaulin on a barge. But you know love is funny that way, and thus it turns out.

We judge it is what is called an "audience picture," by the way the folks laughed at it, especially the women. By that measurement it can be rated as entertainment.

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

Proposition

MARY ADAMS, let us call her, was just a little different from most of the girls who come to New York from small towns. To her, Broadway was nothing more than the name of a street. She had no yearning for theatrical fame. And night life was merely something she had read about in magazines.

So the city itself meant little to Mary. It was simply the means to an end; that end being success in the business field. Yet, like so many thousands of others, she came, she saw—and she was conquered.

But, as usual, I'm ahead of my story. We'll have to go back about three years now and find the Mary who was graduated with such decided honors from a high school in a Midwest city. Smart, efficient and armed with the highest recommendations from her teachers, she had little trouble securing a position with a manufacturing concern in her home town.

For a while she was as happy as she had any right to expect. Her life consisted of her job, a few wholesome pleasures and an occasional date with the boys she knew. Then, cruelest of blows, her parents died within a month of each other. And Mary, in her sorrow, began to long to get away.

Marriage held no attractions for her, and she craved a business career. She wanted a job that would demand all her talents; a job that would lead to the success of which she dreamed. And so Mary left her home town and came on to New York.

Before she had used up too much of her savings, she found the position for which she had been looking. She worked hard, tended to business, was the first in the office each morning and the last to leave each night. And as a reward for her punctuality and diligence—she was laid off at the end of six months.

Weary months of job-hunting followed. Her money disappeared rapidly, and with it some of the people she had considered her friends. She had met a few men since she had come to New York. One or two still came occasionally to take her to dinner.

But now, out of a job, and in almost desperate straits, Mary felt that she could detect a change in their attitude toward her. It was, she thought with a shudder, as though she were something on the market.

One wanted to lend her money. When she got into a taxi with him that night she discovered that his offer did not spring from a charitable impulse. The other put his proposition to her bluntly—an apartment.

To both of them, Mary said, "No," and what is more important, she meant exactly that. It wasn't easy, faced as she was with the uncertainty of the future. But there was something deeply rooted within her—upbringing, perhaps, or natural instincts—that would not let her take that way out.

The only compromise she would make was her acceptance of dinner engagements with the lad who had propositioned her. And that was merely because those dinners were the only decent meals she had.

Through him she met Roger. Roger was married and separated from his wife. He told her that frankly when they first met. He was rich, a fact which she learned from other sources. And he was kind to her at a time when kindness in her life was sadly lacking.

When she first began to go out with Roger, Mary was very cautious. What, she asked herself, could a man like him want with a girl like her? And she did not like the answer that presented itself. Then, as time went on and his interest continued to appear merely a friendly one, she grew to trust him. Life was much brighter because of his friendship. Hope for the future, which had died long ago, began to stir again.

True, her room rent was weeks in arrears. Her little hoard of money was so slim that she was afraid to count it. Of these things she said nothing to Roger for the simple reason that she feared to to give him an opening for any suggestion that he might wish to make.

A job came her way at last. And what a job! It was in a factory where she sat all day under a burning light and wound a slender thread around artificial flowers.

She was there a month when summer burst into the city on a wave of deadening heat. Mary wondered how long she would be able to stand the breathless air of the factory. Her room, close and stuffy and small, was not much better. The only things that kept her from utter desperation were Roger and their little excursions to beaches and to road houses.

They were at a roof garden one night when her arms and head and back ached worse than usual. Almost unconsciously she began to tell him of her job and its rotten conditions.

Roger stretched his hand across the table.

"Mary," he murmured, "we've been friends quite a while now. Won't you let me help you? Won't you let me do something for you?"

The girl put her fingers to her ears as though to shut out the words that she knew were coming. Then, hopelessly, she dropped her hands and looked across at the man.

"Don't go on slaving in that dump," he was saying. "You'd like my place . . . twentieth floor . . . always cool . . ."

Mary did the most difficult thing she had ever been forced to do. She shook her head and reached for her purse.

"Please let's not talk about it tonight," she begged. "I'm tired and have a headache. Please take me home."

After Roger left her at her door, Mary went around the corner to a speakeasy and gulped down three highballs in rapid succession. She had never drunk at home, but who was there to care what she did in New York? Her temples pounded. The heat was murderous.

Her last little shred of faith was gone. Roger had failed her. He had acted like all the other men when they had learned of her circumstances. She had treasured his friendship so very highly. And now she knew that it had never existed.

Thus, what was left for her in life? Nothing except slavery and disappointment and disillusionment. Her head whirled as she left the speakeasy. On the way home she stumbled into a drug store and made a purchase.

The landlady found her on the flor the next morning. And beside her was an empty vial. . . .

It was Roger who took charge of things and had the girl's body sent back to her home town for burial. And after it was over, he went to a nearby speakeasy. He was badly in need of a stimulant.

There he met a friend and, after the first few drinks, his tongue began to loosen. He told the other man what had happened.

"She was a funny kid," he mused. "Proud and independent as the devil. But I liked her. I wanted to help her. Only two nights ago, just before she killed herself, I offered her a job in my office. . . .

Film Poloists Get Bid

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, July 15.—Some of the lads who used to rib the Hollywood polo players now can laugh out of the other side of their mouth. Eduardo Bedoya, South American millionaire and magazine publisher, has offered to pay all expenses if Charles Farrell and a team will fly to Argentina in September to play a series of exhibition matches.

The boys will be royally entertained, will have fine strings of ponies at their disposal and have a chance of making some money out of it on the side.

What is more, they expect to receive similar invitations from Mexico City, San Salvador and Chile.

The personnel of the Hollywood invaders—if invade they do—will be Farrell, Guinn (Big Boy) Williams, Johnny Mack Brown and Will Andrews, 17-year-old nephew of "Big Boy," who came out here a delicate youth and who has developed into one of the wiriest players in the movie crowd.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., July 15.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Do you remember some of the statements before the London conference started? The world was to stop revolving, air was to lose its oxygen if the conference failed. Herriott, of France, said, "America and France look with a like purpose on economic problems, the conference must succeed." Cordell Hull really waxed dramatic: "The failure of the conference will mean the failure of statesmanship, selfishness must be banished from all minds."

Will Rogers

Well, the thing has flopped and we are getting along better than ever. It just shows that nothing is important a month later. The funny part of it is that all those statesmen really thought they were going to "make history." Well, history makes itself, and the statesmen just drag along.

Yours, WILL.

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Aroused over the increasing number of kidnapings, Senator Copeland, of New York, in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, pledges relentless war by government on criminal abductors. He refers specifically to the victim of the latest outrage, Lieut. John J. O'Connell, Jr., of Albany, a picture of whom is shown.

Secretry of the Interior Ickes, in Washington, tells how distribution of the $3,300,000,000 public works fund will bring jobs to a million men. He also makes known that $238,000,000 of the sum is to be used to build the Navy, following which there are stirring pictures of the United States fleet, and a descriptive talk by The Globe Trotter.

At Hendon Airport, England, King George's aces put on a thrilling show.

Grandmas hold a bathing beauty contest at Coney Island.

Highlights of the track meet between picked athletes of Harvard and Yale, and an English team from Oxford and Cambridge, held at the Crimson Stadium, are presented.

Vast herds of reindeer are shown being rounded up in Lapland and sent into the hills for summer grazing.

Shriners at the national meet in Atlantic City stage a big parade on the boardwalk. A feature of the parade was the big number of bands, one from the Syria Temple, Pittsburgh.

(Note—Owing to the necessity upon theater managers to arrange their programs in time schedules, it is possible that some of the subjects in the above issue of Hearst Metrotone News may not be shown in your theater.)

Business Women Vote Wider Survey

CHICAGO, July 15.—(AP.)—The National Business and Professional Women's Clubs yesterday voted to conduct a broadened occupational survey in the light of present-day conditions to determine vocational opportunities, possible discriminations against women and effects of the age factor.

The convention's action followed the report and recommendation of Dr. Lillian N. Gilbreth, of Montclair, N. J., chairman of the research committee.

A resolution, presented by Mrs. Geline MacDonald Bowman, of Richmond, Va., asking that a vocational guidance department be established at national headquarters in Washington to serve as a clearing house on occupational information, was passed.

Another recommendation by Mrs. Bowman, who is national president, was also indorsed, giving the board of directors authority to call a conference of outstanding woman leaders in various fields to discuss the present-day situation and co-operation.

The federation also pledged its efforts "to maintain the present high standards of American education through adequate financial support to our public schools and public libraries, whose services have been impaired by drastic economy programs in many communities."

A report on an incomplete survey, regarding discrimination against women, presented by Dr. Iva Lowther Peters, of Kishkill, N. Y., said that out of 325 local clubs, 136 reported definite discrimination.

Winding up the convention, delegates re-elected Mrs. Geline MacDonald Bowman, Richmond, Va., as president for a two-year term. Other nominated officers were elected as follows:

Mrs. Charl O. Williams, Washington, first vice president; Dr. Florence May Morse, Los Angeles, second vice president; Judge Florence Allen, Cleveland, third vice president; Miss Marjorie Shuler, New York, corresponding secretary; Mrs. E. Pearl Warwick, Champaign, Ill., treasurer, and Earlene White, Washington, recording secretary.

Miss Mercedes Fulton is chairman for the dance which the Junior Woman's Club of Apollo will give Friday evening at the Hill Crest Country Club. Miss Miriam Shaw is vice chairman on Miss Fulton's committee for the affair, which is a benefit for the club's philanthropic work.

Jack Lait Decides to Write That Great Radio Drama

By JACK LAIT

The American play about radio is yet to be written.

One or two dabs and stabs have been made at it. But radio, the fabulous new world, has not yet been travelogued for sight and sound.

The stage has been winnowed and worn to the woof as material; the screen has been revealed, reviled, revued, farced, faked, satirized, dramatized and sandalized.

But radio, that most modern manifestation and everyday phenomenon, has as yet not inspired one playwright-reporter.

Those voices, those personalities, those mysterious souls floating into ours on ether! Back of all the spirit-folk there must surely be fleshly beings.

We know all about the temptations of the smalltown girl on Broadway looking for a chorus job; we have been shown all that besets the honest Iowa maiden who has hitch-hiked to Hollywood . . . But what do we know of the choir-singer who brushes her tender white knuckles against the big iron door of radio?

We are hep to the griefs and joys of the poet in his village garret, the playwright who wins the leading lady who puts his masterpiece over.

Yes, there is a play there.

So I was saying last night to my young friend, Steve Gross. Steve knows a bit about play writing and a lot about radio; I should know a lot about playwriting and do know a bit about radio.

So we decided we'd sit down and write that play.

Globe-Trotting

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

If the South Side businessmen still want a couple to be married at their outing next month, I know two nice South Side people who could use the furniture and the presents to start happy housekeeping.

* * *

Father Cox, in Europe with his pilgrims, hasn't forgotten his friends back home. Nearing Erin's coast at daybreak, July 5, he said "Top o' the mornin'," for all his Irish friends.

Crookham Hollow, near Monongahela, won't be a desirable Sunday picnic spot. Bob Wiper flashes me that the police with guns will be scouring the woods for what some people say is a hyena.

* * *

Another entrant in the hollyhock contest is Mrs. Barbara Uhler. She leads with a plant 10½ feet high. It can be seen at 1409 Martha street, Munhall.

Don't be disappointed! We'll say Gen. Balbo-a yet.

Globe-Trotter Schedule

Speaking from the editorial rooms, Louis L. Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, flashes the latest bulletins over WCAE and WJAS on the following schedule today: WCAE-WJAS, 9:05 a. m. and 12:15 p. m.; WCAE only, 2:15 p. m. and 6:30 p. m.

Farley Plea For Repeal On Air

Addressing an out-of-doors mass meeting in Memphis, Tenn., in an effort to put the state in the wet column when it votes July 20 on repeal, Postmaster General James A. Farley is to be heard over a nation-wide NBC hookup including WCAE tonight at 11 o'clock.

Expectations are that Farley's attendance at the Memphis meeting will mark the turning point in the national fight for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. His address is entitled, "Covenant With the People."

Hollywood Concert

Eight of the famous "Symphonies Under the Stars," Hollywood Bowl summer series, are to be broadcast over NBC-WCAE weekly with the first scheduled at 12:15 a. m. Nicolas Slonimsky, conductor of the Chamber Orchestra of Boston and the Pierian Sodality of Harvard, is tonight's guest conductor.

Also for the music lovers: concert by the Koshetz Ukranian Choir—the first of a weekly series—WJAS at 8:15; Philadelphia Orchestra Dell concert, featuring Beethoven and Liszt, WJAS at 8:30; Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony, Weber, Grieg and Liszt by the New York Philharmonic, KDKA at 8:30.

To the network from WLS, Chicago, comes the National Barn Dance, widely followed Saturday night feature for weekly airings via NBC-KDKA. The initial jamboree, made up of 13 acts, goes on at 11:30 p. m.

War Thriller

High in the air a German military Zeppelin limping along with disabled engines while Allied planes hunted for her through the night . . . and far below the booming of African jungle drums warning the tribes to prepare for an emergency landing. That is the dramatic setting for tonight's K-7 story, "Drums of Africa." WCAE carries at 9:30.

Big NATIONAL BARN DANCE

PRINTED COTTONS REMAIN THE COOLEST IDEA FOR TOWN WEAR

MANY WOMEN have never been converted to wearing all white for town. Most often, they wear neat little prints instead. This year's crop of fine-designed tie silks, garden-prints and sheers have been a boon to them. But for hot weather wear the simple cool cottons find their way into their hearts. They lend themselves beautifully to expert workmanship, dowager and debutante alike look chic in them and most important of all, they can be quickly freshened in the tub.

IT USED to be that washable things were never meant for town wear and town things were not washable. Fortunately, that troublesome axiom is no more! Today many city pavement clothes like the excellent examples sketched—are tailored and washable. They have all the advantages of most non-tubbable fabrics, being soft and dressy and cool, yet they can be popped into the tub with the simplest house dress.

* * *

YOU CAN see by the brown daisy printed dimity ensemble on the right just what a clever idea these cottons-for-town turned out to be. In some ways the petal-crisp quality of the material is deliberately girlish, and the ensemble would do credit to young daughters as well as their young mothers. Incidentally, don't consider this outfit an "exclusive" for town—wear it in the country, too. It's a perfect answer to the "what-to-wear-on-the-train" problem. Commuters take notice.

* * *

YOU'LL BE further enchanted by the print of the yellow handkerchief linen suit next to it. Fox heads—hundreds of them—peer out from every inch of the material. The costume relies almost wholly on their decorative quality for its appeal. But such a dress deserves more than a nod, because its feather-weight quality is an excellent antidote for the heat. Change its face from day to day by alternating black and white accessories.

When Our Friends Fall Out Should We Take Sides?

Can you be a friend to both sides in a row?

Leota thought she could.

There was Doris. She and Doris had lived two doors apart since they were babies. They'd gone to kindergarten together, through grammar school, and finally Hi. And always they had been the best of buddies.

Then along came Marie. At first she was Doris' friend. After a while the three became almost inseparable. They shared each other's ice-cream cones, jokes and books. They went to the same parties and had the same Boy Friends—until things began to turn twosome. And then the trouble started.

For Doris fell in love with Bill—and so did Marie. Bill was a New Boy. He came to town while Marie was on a trip. He liked Doris. There was no doubt about that. He took her to parties and shows and dances; but—

Then Marie came home and knocked him for a loop, and Love hit her just as hard as it did him. He began to see her, and Doris began to see red.

"I thought you were my friend, but now I know you're just a rotten little two-timer!"

LEOTA'S PROBLEM

So, of course, they're not speaking any more.

Which is where Leota comes in—with plenty of grief.

She loves them both. Both of them have become part of her life. She wants to be friends with both of them. And she doesn't think it is anybody's fault that Marie and Bill love each other. She thinks it is just one of those things that happen to humans, and can't be helped.

She is grieved because Doris has been hurt, but she sympathizes with Marie, too, and she can see no reason why she should cut her out. She thinks that if anybody has done any two-timing, it's Life, and not Marie. So why can't they all be sensible and keep on being friends, as they once were?

DORIS RESENTFUL

But Doris won't have it.

"You're not my friend, if you're hers!" she cries, choking with indignation and sobs. "You can't be a friend of mine, if you still think she's okay. If you can't be on my side, I don't want your friendship! You'll have to choose between us!"

So—now what?

Is Doris right? Must we "take sides" when our friends fall out? Are they being fair when they ask us to? Have they a right to feel that we're treating them shabbily if we won't?

What would you do, if you were Leota? Or Doris? Or Marie?

Come on—

Let's have your ideas!

THE LITTLE MADONNA -o- -o- Drawn by Nell Brinkley

Madonna - Della Robbia.

Madonna-of the Subway.

This reporter made the door of a subway express in New York City just before it clamped shut and fell gratefully into a seat. The train moved off with her and that assorted collection of subway humans that is everlastingly interesting. And after she and they had stared absently at one another while light and darkness fled by, for a few moments, the reporter became aware that a highly varied group across from her were wearing strangely sentimental looks, and were lost in contemplation of some one beside her.

She looked there; and found the Little Madonna! No wonder the faces across from her, one rough and work-worn, one that of an elderly, rather fragile dandy, another that of a painted, hard, shrewd woman, still another of a bare-headed, idle-minded youth running an errand, and the other that face we see so much, the man-face with the puzzled, harrassed look of too much work and worry and not enough pleasure and time to think; no wonder these faces were all gently touched with smiles—unconscious smiles—the almost foolish smiles that most of humanity can grow when they are confronted with the elemental sentiments of life.

There sat a small person, dark, feminine, gentle-looking, hardly more than a child, all tricked out in immaculate white, so plainly her "best." And the white went on to the contented infant, as beautiful as she was, in her lap, abandoned to profound slumber. Making himself comfortable—he was. And she, small, thin—could she be 16?—was making herself his bed of roses.

"His older sister," thought the reporter—and what a devoted one. She was not old enough in all logic to be his mother. And then she saw the rings—the tiny spark of a diamond, and the white-gold band, and the look of pride suddenly flashed up, and she knew. A little Madonna.

Of course you know that the reporter found out his name and how old he was, that he was going to visit his grandmother in Brooklyn, and that he hadn't been able to "hold out!" And that his young father was very, very proud of him. She gathered that he was in fact almost bursting! Like a shiny red balloon.

All the way home the reporter remembered the little Madonna of the Subway; and the lovely glazed plaque of Della Robbia of Mary and Her Child.

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Gift for the Hostess

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When visiting friends in a distant city, to whom should the gift be given, the mother or the daughter? Of course, I am visiting the daughter. Should I take the gift with me or when I return home send one?

Do you think money would be embarrassing, according to the conditions nowadays? R.

If you are planning to give only one gift, this should be given or sent to the mother, who is your hostess. It is correct either to take the gift with you or to send it with the bread and butter letter that you write when you return home. If you don't know the mother, or don't know her very well, before you go to make your visit, it would probably be better to send it after you return home. Then you will know her tastes better.

I am sure that the gift of money would be embarrassing. If these friends are so "hard hit," I am sure that they would not be inviting friends to visit them. Instead of this giving of money, you might, if you think it appropriate, make your gift an especially practical one, a purse for the mother, say, or some practical gift for the home, linen or some china or glass that you have observed that they would gladly welcome for the home.

Introduction

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—When a young woman is being introduced to an elderly man or woman, should she rise?

2—When she is leaving, should she say that she is glad to have met them, or wait for them to say something first? D.

1—The young woman would certainly rise at once when she is being introduced to an elderly woman . . . she would, I think be embarrassed if she didn't do so. And while it isn't necessary for her to rise when the elderly gentleman is introduced to her, I like to think that she will, out of innate regard for and compliment to his "rich collection of years." A gracious respectfulness is an especially pleasant quality to have or to cultivate, and it is a fine thing for everyone of us to add our quota to it.

2—Either is correct. This expression of "I am so glad to have met you," or "It has been such a pleasure to meet you," or "I am so happy to have had this opportunity to talk with you" is a richly human thing to say to another person, and it has no limitation as to who is to say it. Anyone is glad to hear it, especially if it is said with sincerity and graciousness.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Defense Against Part-Scores

The proper defense against part-score contracts is frequently very much neglected, principally because most players feel that a hand is very uninteresting if it is not played at game. However, part-scores have a hypothetical value far greater than actually shows on the score sheet and frequently are the reason for large sets suffered by the other side.

The following hand was well played by the South player, but I venture to say that almost everybody would have found this particular defense if the contract had been four spades instead of only three. With the contract short of game, I am quite doubtful about it.

East, Dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ 3 ♡ K 9 ◇ Q J 10 6 5 2 ♣ A Q 9 5
♠ A J 7 4 ♡ Q J 8 6 3 2 ◇ — ♣ J 4 3	North West East South	♠ K Q 6 5 ♡ 10 5 ◇ A K 9 7 3 ♣ 10 8
	♠ 10 9 8 2 ♡ A 7 4 ◇ 8 4 ♣ K 7 6 2

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

The bidding was rather strange and probably East and West deserve a certain amount of credit for stopping short of game. However, they could not have been very severely criticized for reaching game as they could not possibly read the unfortunate distribution of the hand.

South opened his fourth best club—probably his best lead under the circumstances. North won with the Ace and returned the suit and Declarer finally trumped the third round. He now laid down the Ten of hearts and South allowed his partner to win with the King. A diamond was returned and Declarer won with the Ace, following with another heart. At this point it was apparent to South that the Declarer was trying to establish the Dummy, disregarding his own hand entirely. Such being the case, South's four trumps might prove fruitless. He therefore won the heart with the Ace and returned his last card in that suit. North ruffed with the 3-spot and East overruffed with the 6, retaining the King-Queen alone.

Suspecting now that South held all four spades, he laid down the King of diamonds and followed with another diamond. At this point if South had made the mistake of throwing his last club the hand could have been made on a crossruff. However, this particular South was very much alive to the situation and trumped with the 8-spot. Dummy overruffed with the Knave and then a low spade was led back to Declarer's King. From now on the Declarer was helpless, as he could not overtake the spade Queen and he could not lead the suit out. Actually, he led another diamond and South ruffed with the 9. The Ace won and Declarer was now forced to lead a heart and allow South to trump.

If the Declarer had chosen to lay down the Queen of spades the result would have been the same, as then he would have had to lead a low diamond and ruff in the Dummy. This particular defense is not spectacular, but is sufficiently clever so that I doubt whether most players would use it in playing against a part-score contract.

TODAY'S QUESTION

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♡	4 ♣
4 ♡	Pass	4 ♠	5 ♣

You, South, hold:

♠ A K 9 4 ♡ Q J 8 ◇ A 8 4 2 ♣ 9 4

Neither side is vulnerable. What do you bid?

Answer: Pass. This pass is Forcing and calls upon your partner to make the decision. As far as you can tell, four spades may be the limit of the hand for you and your partner; five may be makable or there may be a Slam in the hand. On the other hand, the opponents' five-club bid may offer a very lucrative penalty. Since you have opened the bidding and later given your partner a free Raise in his suit, you have more or less stated your side of the case and must leave the decision to him. He absolutely cannot pass on this bidding; he must either double or bid more in hearts or spades. This is a very good example of what is known as the absolutely Forcing pass.

Madge Repeats Her Message From 'Floss'

Dicky sprang to his feet as I said that I was foolish enough to be chagrined when the young lady insisted that I must be his mother. His eyes were hot and stormy, and I thought suddenly that they held a resemblance to those of a baited animal.

"I've had enough of this," he said. "Tell me without any more monkey business what all this means."

"He wants it in chronological order, dear," Lillian put in with the demure air of a sweet woman endeavoring to be helpful in trying circumstances.

"All right." I straightened myself resolutely. "I'll try to remember everything just as it happened. Lillian and I were sitting here talking when the telephone rang. Lillian went to the telephone—it was too far for me to reach—and she thought the person at the other end asked for Mrs. Graham; so she shoved the couch over to the telephone. Luckily it was easy to move. The casters are very good on this couch. Don't you remember you remarked that, Lillian?"

"Yes, dear," Lillian assented sweetly, and Dicky uttered a sound that was neither a snarl nor a bellow, but possessed some of the properties of both. I saw him swing abruptly toward the door, and I realized, with the knowledge born of years of experience, that in another second or two his anger at our baiting would master his evidently avid curiosity concerning the message that had been left for him.

REPEATS CONVERSATION

"It was such a queer voice that answered me when I said 'Mrs. Graham,'" I went on quickly. "It was different from that of any woman who ever has telephoned you. She said it was 'Dicky Graham,' she wanted, and when I told her you weren't here, she appeared quite annoyed. She asked me if I knew where she could find you, and when I suggested the studio, she said she'd rung an arm off—I believe that is the expression she used—trying to get you there.

"She seemed very insistent that I should give her some place where you could be found, and when I told her that I would give you a message, she wanted to know if I were your mother. I told her no, and asked if she would like your mother's address, but she said—I think these were her exact words—'Say, are you kiddin' me? What would I want to be talkin' to the mother canary for? It's the Dicky-bird I want. But who are you, anyway?'"

From beneath my carefully lowered eyelids I was watching my husband closely as I repeated the insolent speech Floss had made. And I brought into play every bit of mimickry I possessed with the result of startling myself by the accuracy of my reproduction of her vocal mannerisms.

DICKY GETS ANGRY

And Dicky recognized the voice! I knew that by the tightening of the lines about his mouth, and a sudden tensing of his whole body. I gave him no chance to speak, however, hurrying on almost breathlessly with my recital.

"I told her that I was your wife, and she seemed very much astonished and annoyed at the information. She said the big boy had been holding out on her. She also expressed sorrow at 'getting you in bad with the home hearth fire,' but opined that it was your own fault. She said it was no use to give me a message, but I told her that I'd be glad to give it to you, and also that I was sure you had not meant to deceive anyone as to your marriage; that no one ever bothered with asking who were married and who weren't, in our artistic circle.

"That seemed to soothe her a bit, and she said, 'Just tell the Dicky-bird Floss called. He'll understand. Do you? I do hope I've made it plain.'"

I fairly cooed the last words at him. He strode a step nearer the couch, and I saw his fingers clenched tightly into his palms.

"You've made one thing plain," he said with shaking voice, "that you're having a perfectly swell time making game of me. I wish you good luck!"

He turned and went through the door into the hall, slamming it after him.

Health Value of Bran in the Daily Diet

Our modern, refined foods contain too little of the bulk required to make the system function properly. This is one example of the many ways in which we are the victims of so-called "progress."

Dr. Copeland

To promote normal elimination many foods have been recommended. Bulk foods of one sort and another have been tried. Bran has been used successfully for this purpose, but there has been considerable controversy concerning its real effect upon the human system.

At least two laboratory investigations, as well as the many experiences of physicians and laymen, have proved that with healthy men and women, bran has a definite value in promoting proper elimination.

Two eminent scientists, Drs. G. R. Cowgill and A. J. Sullivan, recently completed a study of six men, all of whom had suffered from constipation for a considerable period. They report that in five cases out of the six the use of bran was effective in correcting the constipation. The exception was a man who was unable to tolerate bulk either in the form of bran, fruits or vegetables. This case would be diagnosed by the doctors as "irritable colon." The other persons were free from any organic disease of the gastro-intestinal tract.

These authorities and others agree that when the bowel is highly irritable, narrowed or ulcerated it should not be subjected to the overstimulating effects of fibrous or bulky foods. Such persons need specially prescribed diets, taken under medical supervision. In these cases it is not bran alone that should be avoided. Other fibrous foods, spinach, for instance, cannot be eaten without bad effects. Fortunately these cases represent only a small percentage among those who suffer from constipation.

In an investigation at the nutrition laboratory, Teachers' College, Columbia University, particular attention was devoted to the effects of bran on the alimentary tract. Albino rats, animals whose digestive processes closely resemble those of the human, were the subjects of the experiment.

The report says: "In every one of the 22 rats fed bran, as well as the two controls which ate no bran, the tissues were diagnosed as normal, no lesions of any kind being found. Therefore, it is concluded that bran fed in moderate quantities, such as is usual in human consumption, will not damage the tissues of the normal alimentary tract." Tests made on healthy young women have borne out this conclusion.

Bran is not a cure-all, of course. But the weight of evidence shows that in the case of the normal, healthy individual, bran is effective in promoting proper elimination, and is without harmful effects.

It may be that some of the unfavorable statements made concerning bran have been based upon opinions, not upon research. It is safe to say that in persons of fairly normal health, its possible benefits outweigh the objections urged against its use in the diet.

Ashamed of Home Folks

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

This article is not for parents. It is written for the young person who, having left home to earn a living, has seemingly outgrown the home folks—and in one instance, the unhappy consequences.

The girl, we'll call her Ruth, had worked in a large city for four years. She had learned the smart way to do her hair; she had learned "smart" repartee—some people call it wisecracking. She read grim Russian tragedies—because a certain set did so. She learned about canapes and cocktails. She wasn't a bad girl. Don't misunderstand. She had just acquired a shiny veneer of sophistication—and the attention of a decent young man. Mother asked in her letters about Ruth's "beau." That made Ruth shudder.

Then, Ruth's home town not being too far away, she planned a week-end at home, and mother generously included the "young man" in the invitation. And Ruth confided not wisely nor well, in a young girl in her office, that she just wouldn't think of letting John see her mother and father—they were so hopelessly old-fashioned. Why, she could fairly hear mother urge John—"Pshaw! Take another helping. There's plenty more in the kitchen." She could picture the old-timey dishes laden with good things, but with too much of each, going around and around the old oak dining table. And she knew it would finish her with John.

Yet, when she returned to town after her visit home, alone, John was strangely silent and grave when they were together, and a little distant.

And one night he said: "I'm sorry you wouldn't let me meet your mother and father." (The girl confidant had told him of her conversation with Ruth.) "You see, while I'm not madly in love with you, you have everything I'd ask for in a wife—and I'd been thinking—" A pause. "Oh well, it doesn't matter now, for if you are ashamed of your own parents I'm sure you would be of mine. They're just folks. Dad eats in his shirt sleeves and mother still wears high-laced shoes and would have gotten out my baby shoes and my baby pictures for you to see, and you'd have been bored to tears. It's a good thing I found out how you feel about those things before you and I got any closer."

Need I point a moral? Need I say that Ruth suddenly discovered that she had gotten closer to John than she imagined? Tears. Regret and I hope, the realization that fundamentally she and John, and their respective parents were alike, and that the only change has come in the superficial things of life—such as canapes and cocktails. I hope it isn't too late for Ruth and John to still work things out sanely and wholesomely.

Painted Woodwork

It is better to wash painted woodwork a small amount at a time, rinse and then wipe dry. This will prevent those streaks so often seen following paint cleaning.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Smoothness and youthfulness of the neck depend almost entirely upon how the head is held. Drop the chin and creases go necklace fashion across the throat. If sags have started, if fiddle strings have appeared, annoint the skin surface with coco butter, start slapping from collar bones to chin, smooth upward with flattened palms. Follow with an ice rub.

Puffs under the eyes are sometimes inherited. Or they are caused by fatigue or intestinal disorders. To allay them try bathing first with hot water, then with cold, massaging gently with coconut oil or lanolin, working with the first finger from the eye corner in toward the nose. Fresh air, long hours of restful sleep, a balanced diet are all helps.

There's an idea, prevailing generally, that brushing is harmful to the permanent wave. Wrong again, Geraldine. Brushing destroys the finger wave pattern, naturally, because it stretches it out of design. But the curl quality remains in the hair, comes bouncing back as soon as the glorious top is shampooed, or even moistened slightly with hot water. The time for the invigorating currying is the night before the head washing.

GROUP TO DRAFT NEW PLAN FOR P. O. RAMP

A committee to be appointed by Mayor John S. Herron will meet Tuesday in the City-County Building to discuss new plans for the postoffice building's vehicle ramp.

If the committee agrees on a plan it probably will go to Washington during the week to ask the approval of federal authorities.

Council yesterday authorized the Mayor to name the committee after it was decided the proposed ramp over Seventh avenue and into Pentland street would be unsatisfactory.

DISFIGUREMENT SEEN

Attending yesterday's hearing were representatives of the Planning Commission, Better Traffic Committee, business interests and Maj. Robert Greenfield, government representative.

L. W. Monteverde, chairman of the Planning Commission, said the proposed ramp over Seventh avenue and into Pentland street would ruin the beauty of several new buildings in the neighborhood. Monteverde also opposed a ramp from the postoffice loading platform into Sevenah avenue.

PROPOSES OVERPASS

He suggested a Seventh avenue overpass ramp for access to the postoffice be added to the proposed Liberty-Crosstown thorofare, and that the western line of the combined project be cut through the old P. and A. Telephone Building.

The telephone building would be removed to permit Pentland street to be widened 10 feet, creating a 40-foot street between the postoffice ramp and properties on the opposite or lower side of Pentland street.

Councilman W. Y. English opposed the Pentland street ramp proposal because of the large property damage the city would incur.

The committee to be named by the Mayor will be composed of representatives of Council, the Better Traffic Committee, the Planning Commission, Retail Merchants' Association and interested property owners.

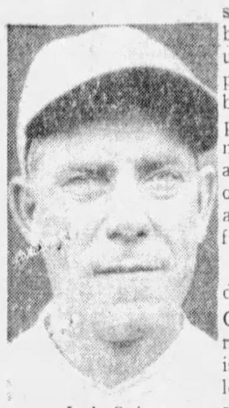
MANY VETS PASSING OUT OF BIG SHOW

PERHAPS YOU THOUGHT last winter that Father Time had done an unusually big job in lopping so many veterans from the major league baseball roster in a single off-season. But it appears now that the old boy with the scythe was only warming up, for right in the middle of the campaign he has resumed operations on a broader scale than ever. To reduce expenses, or to make room for younger men under the 23-player limit, there is a general movement among the club owners to weed out the oldtimers who are believed to have outlived their usefulness.



Jack Quinn

When the Reds gave an unconditional release to the venerable Jack Quinn, the oldest performer in the majors, they not only reduced the vanishing tribe of spitball pitchers to Burleigh Grimes and Urban Faber, but added another man to possibly the longest outgoing parade of veteran players the big leagues ever have known in mid-season. Within a single week, the Pirates dropped Pitcher Remy Kremer unconditionally; Pitcher George Uhle got the same kind of release from the Giants; the Reds gave Third Baseman Andy High his freedom; the Red Sox turned Outfielder Bob Fothergill loose and sent Infielder Barney Friberg to the Missions; the Indians opened the gate for Coach Bib Falk, and the Cubs made Outfielder Taylor Douthit the property of Kansas City, though he refused to report.

Last month even a manager felt the ax when the Indians dismissed Roger Peckinpaugh in favor of Walter Johnson. Around the same time, the Dodgers sent First Baseman Del Bissonette to Baltimore and parted with Catcher Clyde Sukeforth and First Baseman Lu Blue; the Braves shipped Pitcher Harry Seibold to Albany, and earlier, Outfielder Clifton Heathcote was let out by the Phillies. It's a record year for the erasure of familiar old figures from the major league picture One continuing to be a notable exception is Rabbit Maranville. While it's all going on here's the old Rabbit, almost 42, still holding down a regular infield job for the Braves and supplying the punch that knocked in the winning run in the tenth inning to beat Larry French and the Pirates.

IN THE RECALL of Charley Devens, former Harvard pitching ace, from Newark in exchange of Don Brennan, Manager Joe McCarthy says Devens may not strike a brilliant stride right away, but may be affected by overcagerness to win and the fact that he will be facing better hitters than he encountered in the International League. But Joe thinks that when this has worn off Devens speedily will prove that he is a major league pitcher. For Newark, the former college star won 10 games and lost six, and he was leading the International League in strikeouts with 91. The only drawback was that he

CLASSY FIELD ENTERED AT ARLINGTON

CHICAGO, July 15.—(AP.)—Some good 3-year-old had a chance today to prove a claim to the 1933 championship of the division, and take away with it the victor's share of a $45,000 purse, in the fifth renewal of the Arlington Classic.

A field of 18, good and indifferent, was named for the mile and a quarter, and every thoroughbred with any kind of a claim to championship honors was included. A victory for one of the ranking stars meant a stronger claim. Triumph for an outsider would serve to scramble the situation a little more.

Mr. Khayyam, winner of the American Derby, and Gold Basis, which won the Latonia Derby two weeks ago, were the co-favorites at 4 to 1. Arrayed against them were Head Play, War Glory and The Darb.

The race was considered so wide open that the top price quoted against any horse was 30 to 1—that against Kerry Patch, victor in the Belmont Futurity last fall

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE FALLEN BASTILE—July 14 is the French Independence Day, commemorating the Fall of the Bastile on that date in 1789. The well-known Bridge de la Concorde in Paris, begun in the same year, was entirely constructed out of the materials obtained from the demolished Bastile "so that the sovereign people may trample continuously upon what used to be the symbol of royal tyranny." The bridge was completed in 1793 and was first called "Pont de la Revolution" (Bridge of the Revolution).

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., July 15.—(AP.)—Charles D. (Chick) Werner, former University of Illinois star hurdler and member of the 1924 American Olympic team, is the head coach at Pennsylvania State College.

Werner was notified last night by Athletic Director Hugo Bezdek of his appointment. He has served as assistant coach at Illinois since 1927.

Leonard Spence Sets World Swim Mark

CHICAGO, July 15.—(AP.)—A new world record and an American mark already were in the book today as the talent in the National A. A. U. swimming championship meet took to the rough water in the North Lagoon of the World Fair grounds.

The 440-yard free style, the 220-yard back stroke and the 880-yard relay were on today's program.

Leonard Spence, the defending champion gave the New York A. C. a new world record yesterday in the 440-yard breast stroke, and Ralph Flanagan, the 15-year-old human fish from Miami, Fla., lowered the American mark for one mile. Spence made almost a solo performance to win in 6 minutes 8 4-5 seconds, breaking his own world mark of 6:12 2-5.

Canadian Amateur Golf Final Today

VANCOUVER, B. C., July 15. (AP.)—An international 36-hole final round duel between two golf stars of the Northwest, Albert Campbell, of Seattle, and Ken Black, of Vancouver, brought the Canadian amateur championship to a climax today.

There was little to choose between them on the basis of their play yesterday, when Campbell eliminated the tall Portland Oregonace, Frank Dolp, 4 and 3, while Black won from Harry Givan, of Seattle, 3 and 1.

SHANNOPIN BEATEN

BUTLER, Pa., July 15. The Butler Country Club was victorious in its club match with Shannopin, defeating the latter team, 11½ to 6½, here yesterday. Charley Manning, Shannopin professional, shot a 72, the best score of the day, while the home pro, Walter Johnstone, took a 74. A dinner followed the matches.

DODGERS MEET BUCS; SWIFT TO PITCH

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Four doubleheaders, all of which must be run off in the course of a week, was the exacting test that faced the Pirates today as they laid plans to repel the invasion of Max Carey's Brooklyn Dodgers. The doubleheader epidemic is to begin at Forbes Field Monday with the Dodgers furnishing the opposition. On Wednesday and Saturday the Oakland Orchard will hold the excitement of two dual bills between the Pirates and Giants, these bargain affairs to be followed by a Pirate-Red doubleheader in Cincinnati one week from tomorrow.

DODGERS HERE TODAY

Meantime the Buccos must fight off Carey's club in a home-and-home shindig. The two teams will open their series this afternoon at Forbes Field with a single contest. Soon after the battle is over the two teams will travel to Brooklyn, where they will stage a single game tomorrow. Returning tomorrow night they will cross bats Monday in two battles in Oakland.

Dropping a 10-inning struggle with the Braves yesterday, our Pirates yielded a full game to the pace-setting Giants, who upset the Cardinals again. The third-place home team is five games below the New Yorkers, yet only one game beneath the runner-up Cubs.

SWIFT TO PITCH

Bill Swift is scheduled to defi the Dodgers this afternoon in the first game of a series. Joe Shaute or Owen Carroll is due to twirl for the Flatbush crew.

Rabbit Maranville paid off his Pittsburgh debts yesterday, which is the main reason why the Braves trimmed the Pirates in the final game of the series. The Rabbit was of much assistance to the Pirate cause Thursday afternoon through the medium of three errors, so he felt he owed us a setback before he continued on his merry way. The Rabbit uncorked a hot single to center in the tenth with the score tied and two out to register Dick Gyselman with the tally that gave the Braves a 4-3 victory.

Larry French and Fred Frankhouse thrilled in a gripping slab duel. The long fight was packed

Primo Carnera's Life Story

Reviewing First Four Years—The Carnera Caravan Moves On—Baer Wins and Schaaf Dies, and The Stage Is Set for Title Chance for Primo.

(This autobiography is a translation from the Italian of Primo Carnera's remarkably clear memories of his career thus far. The new world heavyweight boxing champion can speak English sufficiently to be understood, but, in preparing his life story, he preferred to do so in his native tongue. So far as is possible, the translation preserves the ideas and spirit of the champion.)

CHAPTER TEN

THE 'CARNERA CARAVAN' NEARS ITS GOAL

By PRIMO CARNERA, Heavyweight Boxing Champion

(Copyright, 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

How happy were my early spring days in Italy this year (1933) at Sequals, Venice, Rome, Milan, Genoa and other loved parts of my home country! The Schaaf tragedy seemed to have occurred so long ago, money troubles and lawsuits were forgotten for the time as I motored about Italy—usually with my manager, Mr. Louis Soresi—and met many friends. We were in one serious automobile accident, but our injuries were slight. And I was more than cheerful because I knew that the championship was all but mine—a match with Jack Sharkey having been arranged through Madison Square Garden. This describes why I felt that way:

Primo Carnera

The so-called "Five Year Plan" to make an awkward novice into a world champion within five years was nearing its goal. That time limit was first thought of in the early fall of 1928, when I was training so hard—and it did, at times, seem so hopeless—for my ring debut which took place in Paris.

Such a "Five Year Plan" did look fantastic—even crazy—to some of those who knew of it!

There was half of 1928 and all of 1929—a long kindergarten period in the school of fighting, so I was told. During that period I worked myself into reasonably good ring condition, taking off most of the fat that encumbered me when Paul Journee and Leon Sec took me in hand. I easily beat a dozen or more equally crude fighters, but so green was I, that only natural strength, weight and size gave me any chance at all against the foxy Young Stribling, a ringwise veteran, in our two bouts late in 1929. They were my first lessons from a first-class heavyweight and came just before my first invasion of America in 1930—which time included parts of the second and third periods in that "Five Year Plan."

As you may recall, George Godfrey gave me a severe test, but I was hammering him to defeat, I am sure, when he fouled out in the fifth round, in June, 1930, at Philadelphia. In my American farewell contest that year, Jimmy Maloney, Boston veteran, won a questionable decision in that city after 10 rounds early in October.

THAT CRITICAL THIRD YEAR

In the meantime, I had quickly knocked out so many second, third and fourth-rate boxers that a great hue-and-cry had been raised of "fake" and "fraud." I was barred by boxing boards in nearly all of the United States and a move was made to deport me—all of which was most embarrassing, because I was trying my level best every time I got into the ring, and, to this day, I do not believe it was necessary to "fix" any fight for me. All the time I was learning more and more how to use my great physical advantages and how to handle myself in the ring before crowds. But, as my then manager, Monsieur See, used to console: "The dogs bark, the caravan moves on." Returning to Europe, I outpointed the rugged Paulino at Barcelona, Spain late in 1930.

Those were tough times in that fistic "Five-Year Plan," but but there were even harder ones to come on my second American tour in 1931. To avenge that Boston decision, I took on Maloney in Florida, early in March, and was forced to fight with two ribs broken in training. I already have described the inferno of pain I suffered when winning the decision in that most agonizing of all my fights to date.

Then I quickly stopped several fair second-raters and one or two veterans in short order and, although howls of "fake" and "set-up" were as loud as ever, Madison Square Garden had the contracts drawn for a Schmeling-Carnera fight in September after the German won the championship in June on a foul from Sharkey. But Max returned to his Fatherland and stayed there for the rest of the year, so I took on Sharkey in October, 1931. That was the most severe beating and the best boxing lesson I have received. But the result did not discourage me nor alter my "Five-Year Plan." The following month I clearly outpointed the rough-and-ready King Levinsky and then knocked out the giant Vittorio Campolo in the second round of a slugging duel for what was advertised as "the superheavyweight" or "dreadnaught world championship."

FATEFUL FOURTH YEAR

"Having entered the fourth year" of my plans I returned to Italy and hammered down a few well-known heavies in Paris, Berlin, London and Milan and outpointed others until just before returning to America, I lost a questionable 10-round decision to Larry Gains at London. That occurred on May 30. When I reached New York early in June of 1932 howls were still heard that "Gains had wrecked Carnera's championship chances" but he hadn't and the Carnera "caravan moves on."

First, I saw Sharkey outpoint Schmeling for the championship. The Garden, too, must have taken that Gains victory seriously judging from the distance between my two or three seats and the ring. Critics and fans still quest on that decision, but I thought it was earned on points, although I was p'ost as far from the fighters as I was from the championship that June night a little more than a year ago.

GRIM DAWN OF FIFTH YEAR

For the rest of that fourth year in my "five year plan" I kayoed a half-dozen fairly promising young heavies and several veteran second and third-raters and lost a highly questionable decision to Stanley Poreda late in the fall of 1932. That setback proved to be good fortune in disguise. On the strength largely of that bad decision, Poreda was matched with Ernie Schaaf the following January, the latter winning by a brilliant K. O. in the sixth round. And so, with the fifth of that "five year plan" several months old, I was signed to fight Schaaf, the winner to meet Sharkey in June for the title. Again loud barks were heard, but the Carnera caravan kept moving on . . .

In a previous chapter I have described that Schaaf tragedy of February last, its sorrowful outcome, and the false cries of fraud that died down with the death of poor Ernie. I have told also of those efforts to confine me to a superheavyweight or dreadnaught class, which surely threatened the championship goal of my "five-year plan." But when that bar was removed, I was never more happy and so returned from Italy to New York, eager to start training, on May 11.

VISITS SHARKEY FAMILY

The next day, Sharkey and I met in Madison Square Garden for the final matchmaking formalities. The previous winter, when training for Les Kennedy at Boston, I had visited Sharkey's fine home nearby and spent a pleasant hour or so there, playing with his charming children and meeting his equally charming wife, Jack, too, honored me with a visit to the gymnasium where I was working, and posed with me for photographs, "kidding" me in good-natured American style.

Thus we met once more at the Garden like old friends. The then champion asked especially about that Easter reception by the Pope and I mentioned his splendid family. Meanwhile I poured beer for my ring rival, and we wished each other health in the newly legalized brew. Then we posed with Matchmaker Jimmy Johnston, the "Wise Guy," for the movietones. The lively little Mr. Johnston held up Jack's left fist (I remember that 1931 knockdown hook!) and then my right (which later uppercut me into the title) as the camera men turned their cranks while all of us sweated and tried to talk our best under the blistering lights.

For a few days I worked out in the city gymnasium of Bill Duffy, my American manager and then we went to our training camp at Dr. Joseph Biers' picturesque country resort near Pompton Lakes, N. J. Many famous boxers, including Sharkey, have trained there. Bill Defer, former featherweight star, was selected as my trainer. He Mr. Soresi, Mr. Duffy and my brother Severiano were with me day and night at my quarters. They were in an ancient and most comfortable house which I was told was visited by the great George Washington even before the United States were born. I know very little history, but the charming Mrs. Bier told us much about her interesting house in which we lived.

BIG FIGHT AT HAND

Next I will describe my own impressions of my most strenuous work for the Sharkey bout and, since the latter is so recent, I will tell of only its big and odd moments as they come to me now, a few days after my "five year plan" was so happily achieved on June 29 last.

SENATORS LOSE TO PALE HOSE, GIANTS WIN

Associated Press.

The hopes of New York's fans for a world series on a five-cent fare were somewhat brighter today for the Yankees were back in a virtual tie with Washington for the American League lead, while the Giants, recovering from a slump, had increased their margin in the National to four full games.

Both New York teams pounded to victory yesterday. The Yanks, bunching seven hits for eight runs in one inning, trounced the St. Louis Browns, 11 to 6, to run their winning streak to seven games and draw to within four percentage points of the Senators. The Giants slugged it out with the St. Louis Cardinals, and although outhit, won their third in a row, 12-7.

Chicago's White Sox and the veteran southpaw, Walter Miller, took care of Washington, defeating the league leaders for the third time in four days, 4 to 0, allowing only three hits and didn't let a runner reach third in scoring his second victory of the series.

The Giants disposed of the Cardinals themselves, pounding Dizzy Dean from the hill in the fifth inning, while Brooklyn and Boston saw to it that the other first division clubs of the National League, the Chicago Cubs and Pittsburgh Pirates, were defeated. The Dodgers, aided by Chicago errors, scored a 5-3 victory over the Cubs. The game ended Chicago's string of victories and the Dodgers won their first game in Chicago since July 12, 1932.

BASEBALL COMEDY

—By NICK ALTROCK—

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Old Dr. Altrock has diagnosed the Yankees and begs to report they are suffering from senile decay. Not that the lads are ready for wheel chairs, but they ain't young enough to spin tops, either. I have looked over the Ruppert employes and I'm not fooling when I say there are enough gray hairs on the Yankee ball club to make a toupee for the old gray mare.

Nick Altrock

I am not getting poetic when I tell you the American League is at the dawn of a new era. The Yanks can whistle in the dark all they want to, but the new dawn will come just the same.

And the experts can talk of bolstering the pitching, hitting, fielding, etc., but what the Yanks need most right now is a diet of goat glands.

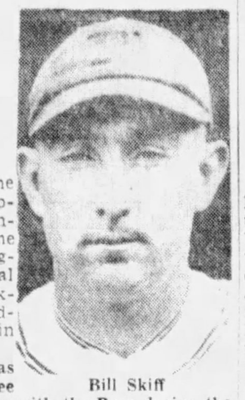
also topped the circuit in bases on balls with 82, indicating that he still may be a bit shy on control.

WHILE THE DODGERS are in town, Pittsburgh fans may get a look at that club's new slugging outfielder, Joe Hutcheson, though the Memphis recruit was benched after a trial in Brooklyn's first game at Chicago because he made a costly misplay on a drive from Jim Mosolf's bat.

Hutcheson is not lacking in size, as he stands 6 feet 2 inches in height and weighs 205 pounds. His poundage is well distributed. Major league surroundings are strange to the new Dodger. Until he joined the Careys in St. Louis a week ago he never had been in a large city.

THE FOLLOWING WAS received from C. A. Campbell, of 7103 Monticello street: "I have been a reader of your paper for years, and am a baseball fan who pays real money to see games. I cannot understand why the newspapers print all the alibis and excuses the managers and magnates offer for their teams and players. It is silly to offer alibis and excuses of a player's being sick or hurt when replaced by a second-stringer, as everybody knows the real cause is that the man is in a slump and not hitting. The Pirates have had no real accidents or sickness like some of the other clubs. Take Chicago, New York and others for example. Of course, I realize the Pirates have only mediocre players at certain positions while some others are over-rated. However, they can hit, and hits win the games. Let us have more unbiased writeups in the newspapers."



Bill Skiff

EVEN IF THE YANKEES fail to come through again this season, Col. Jacob Ruppert probably will not be left without pennant consolation in other directions. Some of the Yankee farm clubs are headed flagward. Newark leads the International League, Binghamton tops the New York-Pennsylvania, Durham is first in the Piedmont and Wheeling is not without hope in the Middle Atlantic.

Incidentally, another former Pirate has risen to a managerial post in the Yankee chain. Bill Skiff, veteran catcher, who was with the Bucs during the first half of the 1921 season and then was shipped to Kansas City, has been appointed pilot of the Durham club for the second half of the Piedmont race, succeeding Bobby Murray.

SPEAKING OF BASEBALL'S chain stores, Branch Rickey, vice president of the Cardinals and originator of the system, keeps such close tabs on the doings of the army of farmhands that he insists on a detailed statement from the manager of each club in the organization after each game.

Joe Vila reports that a printed blank must be filled out, setting forth what every player did in the game; his good points and faults; whether he fans on a high ball or is weak on a curve on the outside corner; whether a slumping player is worried or has his mind on golf; whether a pitcher has lost his effectiveness; why certain players are not used more frequently, and why a certain batsman can hit the ball better in night games than in daylight.

THEY SURELY ARE golf-minded in Great Britain. All attendance records in that sport were smashed during the two-week period that covered the playing of three big events over there recently. The decision to charge admission to the British open at St. Andrews was expected to cause heart-failure among the Scotch fans, but, even though reluctantly, perhaps, 40,000 of them parted with two shillings apiece to trail the players. The Ryder Cup matches at Southport were witnessed by 35,000 persons, and more than 20,000 paid admissions were collected during the British Amateur at Hoylake.

THE BOOM IN college rowing on the Pacific Coast is spreading as a result of last week's regatta at Long Beach, in which Yale, Harvard and Cornell competed against the far Western eights. The University of Southern California is the latest to announce a decision to go in for crew.

The Trojans plan to be ready for competition next spring, which means that rowing at that college actually will start the coming fall. It is predicted that within the next few years several of the smaller colleges on the coast will join the growing line.

BECAUSE LOU BROUILLARD won the world welterweight championship from Young Jack Thompson and then lost it to Jackie Fields, both under the management of a boxing firm in which Jack Kearns and Ray Alvis are associated, it was charged that Brouillard was part of the same outfit.

Lou's agreement, in event of a victory over Thompson, to give Fields the first match for the title, was held to be just another angle in the stable operations to pass the championship around and keep it in the same fistic family. And since Brouillard beat Mickey Walker, similar charges have been heard.

Lou Brouillard

WALKER IS UNDER the management of Kearns, and it has been said that Brouillard in some way is hooked up with the same stable. Maurice Lemoine, declaring himself to be Lou's only manager, resents the intimations that the bouts with Thompson, Fields and Walker were merely meetings of stablemates and therefore open to question from the standpoint of honesty. "I wish to state with all possible emphasis that there isn't a soul in the world other than myself who has the slightest managerial interest in Brouillard," Lemoine says. "I manage Brouillard exclusively. No one else has any part of him. They might like to have, but there isn't a chance for anyone to cut into our business relations. We never have been mixed up in any shady business. Every time Brouillard climbs into a ring he is out 100 per cent to give his best. When we cannot get along in honest, sportsmanlike fashion, we'll both quit the fighting game."

CROSS OPPOSES GUNN IN STATE GOLF FINAL

PHILADELPHIA, July 15.—(AP.)—For the third successive year, the Pennsylvania state amateur golf championship goes to a Philadelphian regardless of the outcome of today's final match.

Harold S. (Bub) Cross, Jr., and Will Gunn, Jr., medalist of last year's tournament, will settle the issue on the Merion Cricket Club's course.

Survivors of four rounds of match play, which went hard with the favorites, Cross and Gunn entered the finals with sensational victories over Woodie Platt and Thomas S. Jamieson, Jr., of Pittsburgh. Gunn won over Jamieson, 5 and 4, being one under par for 14 holes.

Cross, who eliminated Chris Brinke, defending champion, and Gunn, who accounted for William B. (Duff) McCullough, hope today to make up for past failures. Each has been on the threshold of golfing success a number of times, only to lose by small margins.

HERMAN GREEN . . . WINS THE WEST PENN JUNIOR TITLE

GREEN ANNEXES JUNIOR TITLE

By TOM BIRKS

Staff Correspondent.

GREENSBURG, Pa., July 15.—Playing brilliant golf, especially on the greens, Herman Green, of the New Castle Field Club, annexed the silver loving cup, emblematic of the Western Pennsylvania Junior championship, by defeating William B. Nicklin, of Stanton Heights, 2 and 1, over the links of the Greensburg Country Club yesterday afternoon. Green is a freshman at Notre Dame.

Nicklin advanced to the final round by scoring a win over I. C. Ball, of the Churchill Valley Golf Club, in the morning round, while Green easily disposed of Paden Gamble, of McKeesport, who had played the part of Jack-the-Giant-Killer by eliminating both Claude McKee and Jim Marks, the favorites to win.

Nicklin started out by winning the first two holes on the afternoon trek, but when the turn was reached he only had a 1 up lead. Then under the expert guidance of Joe Stevenson, his caddie, who Perry Del Vecchio, the popular professional at the club, thought had a great part in the victory, he won the next four holes. Green's putting was brilliant. The match ended on the seventeenth green, with Nicklin dormie. Green halved the hole to win. Their cards:

PIRATES FACE ORDEAL

with thrills, French pitching himself out of three or four awful clinches.

LEE'S TRICK WINS

Outfielder Hal Lee set the stage for Rabbit's winning hit by a piece of blocking that smacked of interference. Lee is an adept at upsetting the pivot man on a double play attempt, but there was no finesse to his trick of yesterday. Hal singled with one out and headed for second on Hogan's tailor-made double play ball, which would have ended the inning. Piet flipped to Vaughan, who was setting himself for the double shuffle when Lee bumped Arky, whose deflected throw to Suhr hit the stands, Hogan taking second. Gyselman ran for the bulky catcher and Maranville smacked the ball for a hit.

French's fumble of a bunt in the first opened the way for the Braves' first run. They scored another in the fifth largely on Maranville's double.

Mrs. Wendt Wins Edgewood Tourney

Mrs. C. I. Wendt, of the Pittsburgh Field Club, won the low gross honors in the Western Pennsylvania women's one-day tourney at the Edgewood Country Club yesterday, with an 87 score.

Betty Abernathy, of Oakmont, was second with a 91, and Barbara Warmcastle, of the Field Club, was third with a 92. Mrs. L. Kerr, of Aliquippa, won low net in the second division, with a 96, while Mrs. R. K. McConnell and Mrs. Carl Van der Voort tied for low net honors in the first division with 81s.

GRAYS BEAT COCHRANS

The Homewood Grays won over the Ottie Cochran club, of the North Side, 10 to 6, last evening. Brown, Grays' left-fielder, had four hits, including a home run.

LOCAL TENNIS LEAGUE RACE RESUMED

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

The destiny of the Davis Keg, symbolic of Division I championship of the Pittsburgh Tennis Association Inter-Club League, may be determined, for practical purposes, at least, this afternoon as Dr. Dave O'Loughlin leads his P. A. A. array, present pace-setters, to Stanton Heights for battle with George Henderson's second place team.

A victory for P. A. A. today practically would clinch the Keg for the Red and Gray, unless Edgewood should pull phenomenal spurt from third position.

Meanwhile, Edgewood, with Capt. Frank Smith still in the east, faces a tough bet in meeting Bob Lampus and his Shannopinders. The rehabilitated College avenue outfit of Austin Famariss, in visiting University Club, seeks to duplicate its fine work of a week ago, when it pushed Stanton Heights to 5-4. Westinghouse rounds out the upper circuit bill by invading Rockwood.

In Division II, the front-running Belmonters play host to the Bureau of Mines, and the Westinghouse Seconds take on the Rockkwood Reserves. Minnetonka faces Emsworth, while Washington Heights, fresh from surprise win over Belmont, meets the College Avenue Seconds on the latter's lot.

Dr. Dave and Dr. John O'Loughlin, West Penn and Allegheny County champions, yesterday forged to the finals of the second annual Fox Chapel Golf Club invitation turf court men's doubles tournament by scoring a straight-set semi-final win over the home club stars, Tom Robinson and Joe Dilworth, 8-6, 6-3, 6-4. In the other penultimate fray, Frank Broida and Irvin Goodman, Harvard-Pitt combine, 1932 winners, edged out the Pittsburgh Golf Club pair, McCook Reed and Charley Lockhart, in gruelling marathon, 8-6, 3-6, 6-3, 7-9, 6-2. Robinson and Dilworth had three set points on the O'Loughlins in the initial canto, but failed to put across the vital punch. The final is fixed for tomorrow at 3:15 p. m.

SKIN CLINIC DISCLOSES SERIOUS FACTS ABOUT FACIAL IRRITATION

SERIOUS skin disorders can be traced to facial irritation caused by faulty shaving. This is the positive statement of the Gillette Skin Clinic, founded to combat skin troubles arising from improper shaving.

"In effect, shaving is a surgical operation," states the Clinic through its head, an eminent dermatologist. "One cannot be too careful in the selection of shaving instruments and the shaving method he adopts. It is clearly established that faulty shaving is a serious menace to skin health. Be sure to use a sharp blade because a sharp blade is non-irritating to normal skin, whether tender or not."

This is Gillette's reason for exercising particular care in manufacturing the "BLUE BLADE". The "BLUE BLADE" is sharp—23% to 42% sharper than other "makes" of blades examined by photo-electric process in a recent competitive test. It is made by automatic method—a product of machines developed at a cost of millions of dollars. Even steel hardening, a particularly important step in manufacture, is automatically controlled by exclusive process.

Buy and try the "BLUE BLADE". Learn its advantages by pleasant, personal experience. Gillette Safety Razor Company, Boston, Mass.

STOCKS BULGE ON COMMODITY LEADERSHIP

NEW YORK, July 15.—(AP.)—Substantial buying in various commodity shares led the stock market upward after early hesitation today.

"Wet" issues scored gains of 1 to around 3 points, while other groups taken in hand included sugars, gold mining, packing and metals.

Homestake soared 15 points, while Dome, Alaska Juneau and McIntyre were up 2 to 3. United States Smelting and Industrial Rayon rose around 4 points each. Rails and a number of industrial leaders were narrow, including United States Steel, American Telephone and Union Pacific. Advances of 1 to more than 2 points embraced Wilson Packing A, American Sugar, Great Western Sugar, National Distillers, United States Industrial Alcohol, American Smelting, Allied Chemical and International Silver.

The report of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, the first important company to show operations for the first six months of 1933, showed earnings of $3.54 per share as compared with $4.03 for the corresponding period a year ago. The trend, said the report, was definitely upward in the last couple of months.

July automobile production should total about 230,000 units, according to an estimate by Cram, this would represent an increase of 97 per cent over July, 1932. Production for the past week was estimated at 58,022 units, an increase of 16,107 over the preceding week.

The dollar improved its position slightly in the foreign exchange markets. Sterling opened at $4.77¼, a decrease of half a cent, while French francs stood at 5.60 cents, a loss of .01 of a cent.

COTTON PRICE PLANS SPEEDED

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(AP.)—Farm administrators put real speed into their crop price-raising plan today in an effort to get the bulk of $100,000,000 into the hands of cotton farmers during the next three weeks.

Originally it was estimated it would take six weeks to two months to give this money to the cotton farmers in 16 states. But that has been cut in half since Secretary Wallace yesterday announced formal acceptance of the cotton program by 700,000 farmers who agreed to cut their acreages 25 to 50 per cent.

These 700,000 farmers, in return for voluntary agreements to destroy a part of their growing crop, will lease to the government the land on which the cotton was plowed under, or cut down. One hundred million dollars, or thereabouts, will be paid to them in rent for the leased land.

The theory is that the 3,500,000 bales of cotton thus kept off the market will raise the price of the remaining 10,000,000.

Several new taxes are being levied, effective August 1, to provide the necessary money.

WHEAT ROCKETS SIX CENTS

CHICAGO, July 15.—Wheat jumped more than two cents a bushel today the moment trading began. Reports of sudden irreparable damage to the Canadian wheat crop were chiefly responsible. Authoritative estimates were that Canada's 1933 yield of wheat would be only 289,000,000 bushels, compared with recent official forecasts of 340,000,000 busnels. Opening $^{3}/_{8}$-$2^{1}/_{8}$ cents higher, wheat afterward held within the initial range. Corn started at $^{3}/_{8}$ off to $^{3}/_{8}$ up, and subsequently altered little.

Every future delivery of wheat in Chicago quickly overlopped all the high price records scored of late, with May reaching $1.19⅛ on the day's first transaction, and soon mounting above $1.20.

Whizzing rapidly upward to $1.21 wheat responded to excited buying and then in quick succession touched $1.22 and $1.23. At this stage the market was up in some cases about 6 cents a bushel.

The swift vertical rise of wheat prices culminated at $1.23¼, a gain of more than 9 cents a bushel in 24 hours. At $1.23¼ for May, selling for profits broadened out, and the market tumbled temporarily about 3 cents.

RISE IN FARM PRICES AIDS BUSINESS

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Business continues to get lifting power from the relative sharp rise in agricultural prices and also from the partial return flow of the unemployed back to work.

Mr. Rukeyser

Although farmers will have to wait for the next crops except for hogs, to realize the actual benefits of large income merchants and others are discounting the new price levels in extending fresh credit.

As for the return of men to work, it has been estimated by competent industrialists that from the low point the gain amounts to 3,500,000 man hours. That, of course, does not mean that an army of that size has returned to the payrolls, as part of the gain has been represented by the fuller employment of those already engaged on a part-time basis.

At the low point of the depression, it was computed that realized national income which exceeded $84,000,000,000 in 1928 had dropped below $40,000,000,000 during the depression. With a spiral of recovery under way, it is now estimated that the realized national income is running at the rate of at least $45,000,000,000 a year. There is therefore still considerable ground to be retraced, and some careful students of the business situation regard the movement thus far as healthy. Perhaps more than 8,000,000 persons are still without work, and until they have been reabsorbed, business, though improving, will continue on a subnormal plane.

There is some tendency to confuse excitement on the stock exchange with the tone of business. The stock movement can perhaps be held within sane bounds if the stock exchange insists that its member firms require very substantial margins.

ICKES ORDERS OIL TESTS

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(AP.)—Secretary Ickes has ordered that government oil land lessees, in deducting from royalties for impurities must use scientific tests.

The decision, of particular importance in Mid-Continental area fields where lessees have heretofore made arbitrary deductions of from 1 to 3 per cent where sliding scale royalty rates are enforced, was a reaffirmation of a previous order.

Ickes held that royalties must be paid on a basis of 100 per cent of the oil produced, less the deduction for actual impurities based on tests.

WEEKLY BANK CLEARINGS

NEW YORK, July 15.—(AP.)—Bank clearings show a further large gain. The total this week at all leading cities in the United States, as reported by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., of $5,351,557,000, was 29.7 per cent higher than that of a year ago. At New York City, clearings were $3,897,553,000, an increase of 43.4 per cent, while the aggregate for centers outside of New York of $1,454,004,000 was 3.2 per cent higher.

The larger payments through the banks continue mainly at the large centers, at some of which speculative dealings are particularly heavy. Outside of New York gains appear at Boston, Pittsburgh, Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Minneapolis, Omaha, Atlanta, Dallas, Louisville and San Francisco. At Philadelphia there was a decrease and losses continue quite heavy at Baltimore, Detroit and Cleveland. A notable feature of this week's statement is the fact that clearings exceeded those of last week by $364,237,000, whereas a year ago there was a reduction of $469,770,000 from the five days' report of the preceding week.

Figures at leading centers showing increases and decreases as compared with those of last year, are printed herewith; also daily bank clearings each month for the year to date:

JUNE BUILDING SHOWS GAIN

NEW YORK, July 15.—Construction contracts of all descriptions awarded in the 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains during June totaled $103,255,000, according to F. W. Dodge Corporation. This was a gain of almost 34 per cent over the total of $77,171,700 shown for May. During June of last year the contract volume amounted to $113,075,000.

Breaking the June, 1933, contract total down, the Dodge organization indicates a total of $74,434,400 for privately-financed undertakings as distinguished from the total of $28,821,600 for publicly-financed work. Thus the total of private work during June compares with only $53,487,500 for May and $48,806,800 in June, 1932.

Showing a further distribution of last month's awards as between major structural classifications, the current report gives a June total of $27,793,200 for residential building as against $26,519,700 for May, and only $23,116,200 for June, 1932; non-residential building awards during June amounted to $51,024,400 as compared with $31,639,400 for May and $39,812,600 for June, 1932; awards for public works and public utilities during June, 1933, totaled $24,437,800 as against $19,012,600 for May and $50,146,200 for June of last year.

GAIN IN STEEL PRODUCTION WIDENS

By B. E. V. LUTY

Production of steel ingots this week has been at about 58 per cent of capacity against 51 per cent two weeks ago, showing a more rapid increase than previously, since in the preceding four weeks there had been a total rise of 10 points.

This latest sharp rise was more or less unexpected as there had been a rush of buying and specifying to take advantage of prices expiring June 30, with prospects of a corresponding lull thereafter, but some old prices, as in wire products, were applicable to July business while in other products there were special cases of customers being given protection through July. Thus all advanced prices did not by any means become effective July 1 and the rate of buying is not so greatly slowed down. The influence of higher prices and of buyers all down the line having anticipated will be felt much more next month.

On account of costs producers do not like to put units in operation if they would have to be closed in a short time, so that it may be assumed approximately the present rate will be maintained for several weeks. A lull afterwards is commonly regarded as unavoidable.

EXCEEDS CONSUMPTION

That the rate of steel production is far in excess of actual ultimate consumption is quite obvious, hence the expectations of a lull, for it will take time for railroad and building requirements to experience any large increase, it will be long before the oil and gas industry needs much steel, and requirements of the automobile industry, now at the peak of the year, will naturally decrease.

In the very active period of seven years through 1929 production of steel ingots averaged 45,750,000 tons a year, and the four outlets just named took enough steel to leave an average of 25,000,000 tons a year for miscellaneous. With a 58 per cent producing rate output is now at about 39,600,000 tons a year, just equal to 1930 and 72 per cent of the record output in 1929. Allowance for the four outlets leaves about 29,000,000 tons for miscellaneous, or about one-sixth greater tonnage than in the active period. Three of the four outlets are taking very little steel, while the fourth, the automobile industry, is on the verge of decrease and even it is doing poorly relative to its rate prior to 1931.

While the country is still in the depression it is true that the miscellaneous lines of consumption are doing relatively well. This was universally predicted for a long time, that when emergence from depression began the smaller lines would recover at a more rapid rate than the big lines. Allowance should also be made for natural replenishment of stocks and the making of repairs when fear has been replaced by hope if not full confidence. By no means should the greater part of the rise in miscellaneous demand be ascribed to speculation, which means legitimate anticipation of higher steel prices and higher costs in consuming steel as it comes from the mill.

RAIL OUTLOOK VAGUE

Prospects of railroad buying remain uncertain, but freight car loadings, adjusted for seasonal variation, have been rising at an increasingly rapid rate.

The parts of the federal building program first to be put into execution will require some steel, but not much. Later there will be large tonnages.

BUSINESS

Harbison-Walker Shows Profit of $247,700 In Three Months

—By GEORGE H. SNYDER—

HARBISON-WALKER Refractories Company was quick to re-establish itself on a profitable basis. J. E. Lewis, president, today announced that consolidated net earnings for the quarter ended June 30 are estimated at $247,700 after depreciation, depletion and federal income taxes. This compared with a net loss of $206,200 in the first quarter of the year.

A year ago the company showed a loss for the quarter of $140,500. The profit for the second quarter was the first to be reported for a year.

The sudden recovery in the steel industry was a major contributing factor to the improved results of the company. Harbison-Walker makes fire brick. The rising demand for steel made it necessary to reline blast furnaces and open-hearth furnaces which had been idle. Other industries using fire brick also have increased their purchases but steel has provided the biggest share of recent sales.

Preferred Dividend Payments Restored

THE RETURN OF the company to a profitable basis made it possible to resume payments of dividends on the preferred stock a few weeks ago. The company is paying the regular quarterly dividends of $1.50 a share. Two unpaid dividends are in arrears. In view of the fact that the preferred stock issue is small, the payment of these arrears in the near future appears probable.

Earnings for the quarter were more than sufficient to meet the annual dividend requirements of $180,000 on the $3,000,000 of preferred stock outstanding. Earnings for the quarter were equivalent to 15 cents a share on the 1,380,000 shares of common stock after deducting normal preferred dividend requirements for the period. After deducting preferred dividend requirements for the quarter as well as the accumulated dividends, earnings were equivalent to eight cents a share on the common.

Company Reduces Bank Indebtedness

THE COMPANY publishes a balance sheet only at the end of the year. It is known, however, that progress has been made this year in reducing indebtedness to banks. At the end of 1932 these notes payable amounted to $2,050,000. In addition, the Harbison-Walker Securities Company, a subsidiary, had notes payable of $500,000 outstanding.

PREMIERE -:- Gripping Story of Life Behind The Scenes at Hollywood -:- By ROBERT TERRY SHANNON

CHAPTER III.

"I thought you were in prison," she said, forcing her voice to calmness. "Did you escape?"

"Unfortunately for you, I have a full pardon—for good conduct," said Kruger with satisfaction. "No chance to railroad me back to that hell."

He was thin as a scarecrow and the light in his eyes was feverish. In comparison with the groomed and confident men of her present life, Kruger was but a human animal in ruin. He was here to besmirch her joy of life, but Leni unconsciously showed pity as well as revulsion in her face.

"You will want money, of course," she said slowly. "That was what you always wanted. Very well. An arrangement can be made. I give you my word. Will you go now? Tomorrow I will talk with you at my home."

Kruger laughed outright.

"You seem to forget—I'm still your husband."

The violet color of Leni's eyes darkened almost to black. Very slowly the coldness of her breast was beginning to melt against a spreading flame she struggled to suppress.

"For what you did to me you should have been killed," she told him. Each word came like a drop of molted metal out of her tight throat. "Fourteen years old—a factory child in Vienna—Yes, you married me, Karl Kruger. You took me to Berlin and London—and what did you make of me? Heaven help you! They will build a special inferno for men like you!"

BECOMES THREATENING

Kruger started to rise, a red flush mottling his forehead. As he raised his hand he called her an epithet in German. But he did not strike her.

"Don't forget—you are what they call a criminal alien!" he cried out. "I can have you deported if I like. If the public knew why you spent six months behind the bars in Wormwood Scrubbs—you wouldn't be much of a star, hey? You wouldn't like your record paraded, hey? Queens of the screen can't stand publicity like that. No! I know all about these morality clauses. Women like you can't stand scandal and disgrace—not when it's true. I think you'll listen to me, my famous Leni Luneska! Oh, yes—you'll be reasonable!"

Leni's hands were clenched. "Just what do you want?" she asked intently.

"They showed pictures every Friday night in the penitentiary." Kruger rushed on. "Lots of times I'd see you on the screen in small parts. I watched your rise—I knew you'd be a star some day. No other woman had your hair and eyes and skin . . . In my cell I'd suffocate at night and dream about you—you!" His voice rose crescendo. "I'll tell you what I want—I want my wife!"

WAS UNDER AGE

Leni paused for a long time before speaking to Kruger. Curiously enough, he did not gaze at her face but at her graceful hands with their long tapering fingers. The man was not without a certain poetic imagination. Her hands always reminded him of white lilies.

"You are not my husband," she said. Green glints were now showing in her eyes. "That marriage in Vienna meant nothing. I was under age."

Kruger threw a hand in the air. "Under age or not—it's legal. But if not legal—then you lived with me. I tell you I can ruin you—destroy you—drive you from the films. Nobody can shut my mouth."

"You do not frighten me," Leni lied.

But Kruger saw that she was pale across her cheek bones, that the graceful hands trembled.

"All the same you will listen to me," he told her with his voice on its high, unnatural level. "I know you well enough—your vanity and your ambition. You love the spotlight—and you will listen to reason. Are you fool enough to throw everything away? Not Leni Luneska! I'm your husband. You will accept me as such. Let the past bury its own dead."

"That is only a threat," said Leni contemptuously. "What you really want is the money."

"Certainly I want money!" cried Kruger. "All of my life I've been poor as a rat. But I've been starved in prison. I've been starved for a woman to crush in my arms. More than money, I've wanted a woman. You—Leni Luneska—my wife! You belong to me and I'm going to have you!"

A DESIRE TO KILL

His voice was almost a scream. The two burglars in the next office heard the sound of it, but could not distinguish the words. The lower tones of Leni also reached their ears.

"That guy in there is sure giving it to some dame," one of the burglars whispered.

The other answered him carelessly. "Yeah—some guys is like that."

Kruger and Leni now stood facing each other, throwing words like missiles. His face was flushed a dark red and drops of perspiration sprang on his bluish upper lip. Leni's face was completely white. Her lips were drained of blood and the rouge on her cheeks was almost grotesque in its artificiality.

She had known hate before, but never on this earth had something in her heart thirsted to kill. Had it been in her power she would have destroyed Karl Kruger utterly. Not because he had it in his power to wreck her career. Because he was himself—because of a blinding disgust for the man's repulsive physical self she would have obliterated him from human existence.

Each nerve in her body strummed like over-stretched wires. Shuddering revulsion swept through her, nauseated her, sent red flashes darting through her eyeballs.

And behind it all, deep in the very pith of her being was a cold sickening feeling, a clammy weakness of the heart that consumed all the strength in her body. When she spoke, her voice was a husky whisper.

REPEATS DEMAND

"There are a dozen men I know who would wring your neck if I asked them too," she said.

Suddenly he stepped forward in front of her, his dark hands with their bent fingers raised to the level of her white throat.

"And I could strangle the life out of you right here," he said. He was so wrought up that his whole face was twitching.

The truth of the matter was that in any physical combat he probably would have been unequal to Leni Luneska. He was a small man and undernourished. This thought flashed through her mind and she was able to laugh at him derisively.

"You haven't the strength, and you haven't the courage," she told him, gaining better control of herself. "No, Karl Kruger, you are not—what we call in Hollywood—the type. You are only a blackmailer. I'm a fool to let you get my goat."

Her words, oddly, seemed to soothe him. He took out a handkerchief and wiped his forehead.

"We are both fools," he said, striving for poise. "A matter like this cannot be settled when two people are angry. All the same, I put my foot down and will not accept less than I have demanded. You are smart enough to realize that you must come to terms."

"How much?" she demanded crisply.

"Recognition as your husband and all that goes with it."

DESPERATION

She looked at him steadily and shook her head. "Not if it meant my death."

The fire in his eyes began to grow again with disorderly intensity.

"I'll tell you something you do not realize, Leni Luneska. I'm a far more desperate man than you think. My life is not worth the flame at the end of a candle. With me it's either nothing or everything. I may go down to ruin, but I'll drag you with me. Still, I'm reasonable. We are both excited. I'll give you one hour to think it over. Go away before we start clawing again. Come back in an hour and tell me if you are willing to make terms."

It was a truce for Leni, but not a victory. Karl Kruger had spoken the truth—his life was valueless. In the final extremity the recklessness of a coward equals that of a hero. His brain was hysterical, likely to override whatever intelligence he possessed. For the moment she decided it was the part of wisdom to delay.

"Very well, I'll think it over," she said deliberately. "I'll come back in an hour and we will settle everything."

As she left the room and closed the door behind her, her legs felt stiff, her knees rusty. There was one thought in her mind that sang a hideous song. There were men in the city—she had read of them—who would kill a fellow being for a few hundred dollars. Assassins . . .

CAVANAUGH'S HUNCH

Lucky Cavanaugh's interest in motion pictures was so slight that he could scarcely explain his presence in the theater. It had been a whim that brought him to the premiere—yet something deeper than a vagrant impulse.

A hunch, perhaps. Leni Luneska was a hunch, too.

His eyes followed her every movement on the screen. She awoke an odd emotion within him—not desire—rather a sensation of suspense.

Of one thing he was certain—he was not in the least impressed by her fame. He was conscious of no barrier. Beautiful women were not exactly a novelty in his life. In the East at Saratoga, at Belmont and Bowie and Bradley's in Palm Beach lovely creatures were a part of the game—were really the pursuers.

Without eavesdropping, Cavanaugh had heard a part of the conversation between Leni and Douglas Gates. Enough to tell him that Gates would get nowhere with the blonde actress. Here, too, intuition played its part in his opinion.

Synopsis

Attending the premiere of her latest motion picture, beautiful Leni Luneska, the star, is confronted by a shabby, emaciated man, who emerges from the crowd crying "Leni! It is I, Karl Kruger. Do you want me to tell the whole world?" Leni turns white. She tells the man she will talk with him inside. Lucky Cavanaugh, a gambler, fascinated by Leni's beauty, saunters into the theater after Kruger. He prevents Kruger from making a scene and has him placed in a private office until after the show. Cavanaugh then bribes an usher to seat him in Leni's box. During the performance Douglas Gates, Leni's elderly escort, proposes to her. She is tempted to accept him to get away from everything. In the office next to Kruger's, thieves are robbing the safe. Leni leaves her box and goes to Kruger. He taunts her with, "It is not pleasant to have a starving bum hanging around—not when he happens to be your husband!"

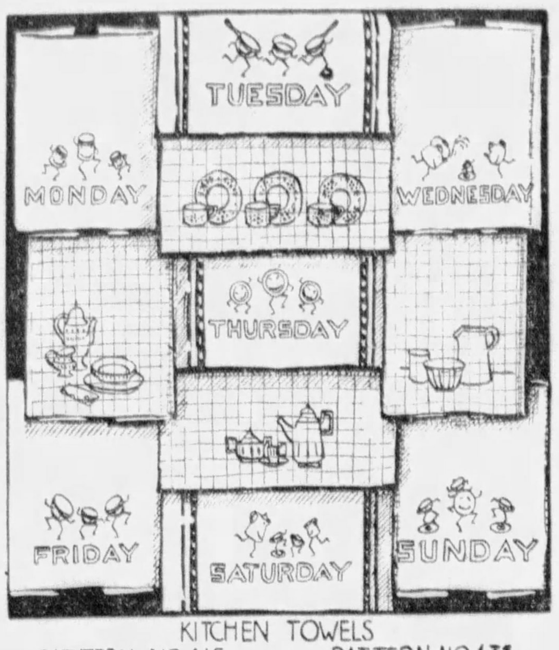
DECORATE YOUR KITCHEN



KITCHEN TOWELS

PATTERN NO. 415 PATTERN NO. 435

By LAURA WHEELER

The day of the dingy kitchen is past. Today this room is made one of the most attractive parts of the entire house. Gay-colored tiles, harmonizing furniture, decorative linens, all make the use of attractive kitchen towels imperative. These towels, either the droll, Sunday-Monday-Tuesday set, Pattern No. 435, or the cross-barred towels with groups of dishes, Pattern No. 415, add the right touch to the modern kitchen. Both patterns are to be done in the simplest of stitches, with outline stitch predominating. Pattern No. 415 includes, besides the four kitchen motifs shown, four motifs in a variety of simple embroidery stitches for guest towels.

Send 10c for each pattern (20c for both) to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth ave., New York City.

The Junior Patrol Mail Box

Saturday again, fellows!

If school wasn't over for the summer, this would be another holiday, but now that it's summer vacation time, it's just another day for a lot of fellows.

You know we have been sort of wondering about that. We know a lot of fellows who get tired having so much vacation. They go around trying to find ways to "kill" time. That ain't so good, not even for kids. Of course, when you get older, you will be working most of the time, and while you're young is the time to play and study.

But nobody should "waste" time. If you can, when you're tired of having fun, it might be a good idea to figure out some kind of work that you like to do. We know some fellows who make extra money by taking care of a garden or by helping around the house. Some fellows have "hobbies" which means that they are very interested in working at something for which they don't get paid except in the fun they have. Collecting stamps or coins is a good example. But whatever it is, they are accomplishing something, and learning something new and interesting every day.

We would like to hear from any members of the Junior Patrol who are working this summer or who have hobbies which interest them. Another good way to use this vacation time is by reading, too, and you'll remember that we suggested that the libraries are full of good books. Maybe all the members of a Junior Patrol could exchange books among themselves, and in that way, each fellow could read all the books the others have.

Remember, though, if you borrow books from the library, to take the books back before the two weeks are up.

Did you hear the radio program Wednesday? Fine, wasn't it? Looks as though that river trip Snuggins and Spike are having with Spike's sailor brother is one of the best trips boys ever took. Of course, in the comic strip yesterday, Snuggins watched the fish—burn to a crisp, but Snuggins will soon learn better than that. We have to remember that he's just a little fellow, and maybe didn't know any better. Anyway, there are lots more fish where those came from.

Here's a mighty pleasant letter Junior got from Betty Bickert, who lives at 5 Club drive. Betty says:

"I have 12 members in my club. The oldest member is 12 years old.

"We are having contests. I have 12 prizes so no one will quarrel.

"You shall hear from me again. Maybe next week!"

Righto, Betty! We'll be looking for your next letter. Twelve members is a pretty good sized patrol club, but maybe you have room for more. Are there any other nice fellows in your neighborhood you would like to invite to join your club? If there are, just send their pledge slips in, Betty, and we'll sign them up.

We got a drawing today from Helen Hasson, of Renton, Pa., Box 5, and a letter, too. Helen's drawing is on blue paper instead of white cardboard, and she tells why in her letter. Here it is:

"I am sending you a picture of a girl's head. Her name is Mary. Do you think she is pretty?

"Junior, I didn't have any cardboard, so I put it on blue drawing paper.

"You asked me to write to you and let you know who were going to be the Captain and Lieutenant. I am going to be the Captain, and Tressa Fiberin is to be the Lieutenant.

"Later on we will have a Vice President, and a Treasurer. What money we get in our treasure we will buy food for the poor. I hope we get a lot, because we want to help the poor.

"We will bring two cents every Tuesday, because that is when our meetings are.

"I would like to have other Captains and Lieutenants write to me."

Boy, that's dandy news, Helen.

That's just what worries the boys. Most of them haven't yet been able to figure out how they're going to do it.

We're Off for Chicago Fair

The Century of Progress is stepping out neatly and firmly. Seems that Chicago is the real town for world fairs. They had one in 1893 that was a pip.

It was our first contribution to international conferences. Political experts say the 1893 midway is what made America a world power.

Wild men, bright lights and dancing girls featured the 1893 circus in Chicago. After your old Minnesota grandpop saw them they had to blindfold him and back him into the barn.

The first fair we remember with any degree of disputatious authenticity is the Paris rodeo of 1900. That was a big success if you can believe postcards.

Then we had one in Philadelphia in 1906. That wasn't a century of progress because Boise Penrose was still a young man. We traveled down to the Jamestown Exposition somewhere around that time and to the St. Louis fair also. In between trips we got in some very fine fire engine chasing.

San Francisco put on a good show some time ago. The buildings are still standing. Which is a mistake. Seems that the architectural rule for fair buildings is to make them out of cheesecloth, apple butter and wrapping paper.

The only building standing as a reminder of the famous centennial of 1876 is an observation tower constructed of stone and rusted iron. It overlooks the Pennsy tracks in Fairmount Park.

What we want to know is why they don't make the buildings permanent? We saw the San Francisco buildings 10 years ago and they are still in fine condition. They're in Golden Gate Park. We hope that the Chicago wonders don't fold up like the scenery in Girl of the Golden West.

We go to every state and county fair we can reach by rail or boat. We have never won a prize or ringed a cane. But when the man pitches his racket we are in the front line trying to track the nimble pea to its three-shell lair. Ain't guessed right yet.

Same goes for three-card monte. We hope that these gadgets and gimmixes are not outlawed in Chicago. It takes one of everything to make a world and the same goes for a world's fair.

Improving County Parks

McGovern Deserves Credit for Enlisting Federal Aid—
Brief Comments on Local News.

The Civilian Conservation Corps is doing good work in the county's North Park. A tract of 14 acres is being cleared in preparation for its conversion into a pond, trees in need of surgery are receiving it, and other improvements are being made by a force of more than 200 young men, recruited for the most part in the vicinity of Pittsburgh.

Thus jobs are being provided for youths who otherwise probably would be without employment, and benefits are conferred on the people of the county, at national expense. Col. C. C. McGovern, chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, deserves credit for his initiative and enterprise in enlisting federal aid for the park improvements.

Private property owners have it in their power to make improvements which will confer a benefit on the community. They should mow weeds and grass, especially on vacant lots which ordinarily receive little attention. Hay fever sufferers are awaiting with dread the approach of the season of their ordeal. If weeds are mowed now, and kept mowed, these unfortunates will be spared much discomfort.

There is a city ordinance which requires the mow- ing of weeds, and we trust that Dr. W. W. McFarland, director of the Department of Health, will not hesitate to use it, if necessary, against property owners who fail to keep their premises clean. Sun-dried grass and weeds in the late summer constitute a fire hazard as well as a menace to the health of those subject to hay fever.

The Life and Property Protection Committee of the Chamber of Commerce has issued a splendid report on its 1933 Clean-Up, Paint-Up and Plant-Up campaign. A total of 150,569 school children did 1,998,775 pieces of work in the campaign, which is the best of the sort that has ever been conducted in Pittsburgh. This is a record of which everybody can be proud.

The service rendered by these young workers for civic betterment has attracted national attention, and is an excellent advertisement for Pittsburgh. We are sadly in need of favorable advertising to counteract the bad effect on our reputation of the news that more than 100 of our public officials, political leaders and members of election boards have been indicted for frauds at the polls last November.

Pittsburgh and Allegheny County need a political and moral clean-up even more than they need a clean-up of the kind that the school children have been conducting under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce. No matter how attractive the community may be physically, we cannot take pride in it if crooks and gangsters control its politics.

Earl F. Reed, special prosecutor in the election fraud cases in the United States Court, has made a good start towards cleaning up our political rottenness. United States Attorney Louis E. Graham and his first assistant, James I. Marsh, have rendered excellent service. Now it is up to District Attorney Andrew T. Park to assist in the good work.

The Federal Grand Jury, after reporting that large numbers of phantoms were registered as voters in the Second, Third and Fourth Wards, states that this is a matter over which the Federal courts have no jurisdiction. Here is District Attorney Park's opportunity. The testimony taken by the Federal Grand Jury is at his service, and the citizens expect him to act.

District Attorney Park hardly can be blamed if he feels somewhat discouraged about prosecuting election crooks because of the leniency shown by the judges to those whom he convicted in connection with the frauds committed in the 1931 primary. But the public has expressed indignation over this leniency, and it may be that the judges will not be so tender hearted the next time.

The wholesale cheating at the polls last November seemed almost the direct result of the courts' action in paroling every last one of the scores who pleaded guilty or were found guilty by juries of cheating in the election the year before. The summoning of Secret Service agents from Washington must also have had its effect. Mr. Park should feel encouraged to try again.

The christening today of the Inland Waterways Corporation's new Diesel towboat, the Franklin D. Roosevelt, is a fresh reminder of the importance of the boat-building industry in the Pittsburgh district and of the increasing use that is being made of the rivers. The improvement of navigation facilities by the flood control project should add still further to the river traffic.

The Roosevelt administration's $3,300,000,000 public works program has been formally launched. While no definite announcement has been made concerning projects in which Pittsburgh is most interested, it is consoling to know that this district will benefit even from work to be done in remote sections, because we will be called upon to furnish iron and steel, glass, brick, cement, machinery and electrical equipment.

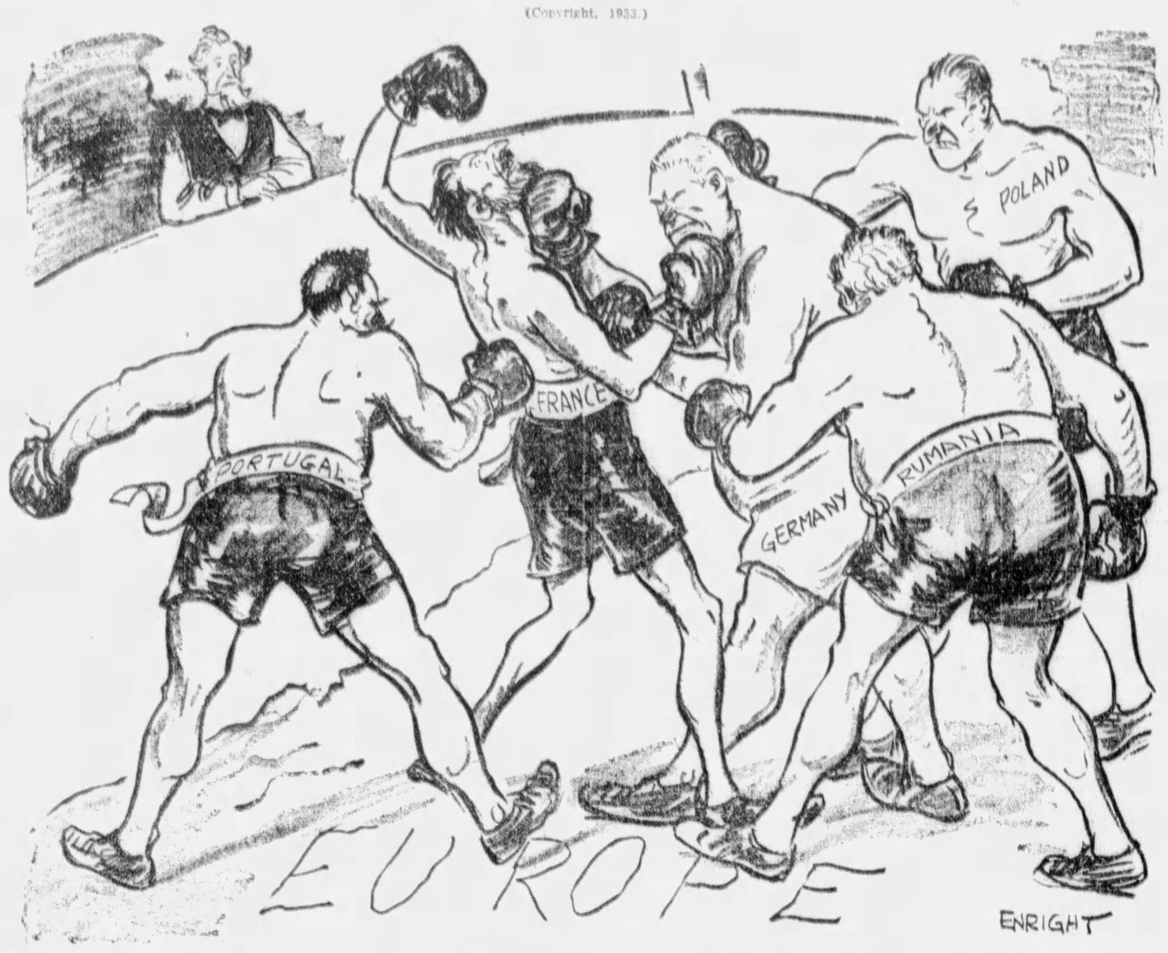
Local business news continues cheerful. Steel operations are increasing and railroad traffic is gaining. The code for fair competition in the soft coal industry is still to be determined, but progress is being made. The coal industry has been a constant source of trouble in Western Pennsylvania for many years. A just code will go a long way toward relieving us from such trouble hereafter.

An abundance of entertainment will be found in the American Weekly to be distributed tomorrow as a supplement with the Sunday Sun Telegraph. One of the noteworthy articles has to do with the three Mdivani princes who have achieved such sensational success in landing rich and beautiful American girls as wives, but are unable to hold them long.

In Puck, the Comic Weekly section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph, George McManus tells in "Bringing Up Father" of Jigg's experience in making a mulligan stew according to directions received by radio. Boob McNutt, Tillie the Toiler, Barney Google and other favorites of the funnies, will also be found pictured in hilarious adventures.

The Tariff Truce

(Copyright, 1933.)



Secretary Hull, our chief delegate at the World Economic Conference, has a theory. He wants all tariffs lowered—including our own.

As a first step in carrying out his theory at London Secretary Hull got the nations represented in the World Conference to agree to a tariff truce. They promised to take no "new initiatives" in the way of tariff measures. But these same nations insisted that tariff policies already in use were not "new initiatives," and should therefore be continued. And then the tariff business got all tangled up in the conference red tape at London.

Today we see how Secretary Hull's "tariff truce" has turned out. It looks more like an old-fashioned battle royal.

France and Portugal are waging a tariff war. France is also waging a tariff war with Germany, and Germany in turn is waging tariff wars with Rumania and Poland. Moreover, these tariff wars affect every country selling the particular kinds of goods that are taxed or excluded in the wars—so that every tariff war affects the United States.

At present, because of Secretary Hull's theory, the United States is about the only country that is keeping the "truce" and doing nothing to build up its tariff defenses.

But a one-man truce never got anybody any place in a battle royal, so perhaps it is time for Uncle Sam to forget about the truce and begin doing something about his tariffs.

Only LIGHT Is Real

But Many of Us Worry About the Shadows.

FIRST IT'S A LION, THEN IT'S A LAMB. IN REALITY IT IS NOTHING BUT A SHADOW.

This small picture shows part of an eight-column cartoon that will be published with an editorial in the Sun-Telegraph tomorrow.

It deals with shadows to which we pay too much attention, since the really important thing in life is LIGHT, without which there can be no shadow.

We print this portion of tomorrow's Sunday cartoon and suggest to readers of the Sun-Telegraph that they think over or even write briefly, what they would say about the difference between shadows and realities. How can we select the important realities, not allowing ourselves to be frightened by shadows?

Children who see this picture know that the man is holding his hands in such a way as to create first a lion and then a lamb.

In real life we too often mistake that which is unreal for REALITY and worry ourselves about things which have no existence.

The ancient people believed that their shadows were really their souls, and feared to lose their shadow, and their souls at the same time.

We know all that is nonsense, still too many of us take the passing shadows of today and the dark clouds of the depression too seriously. Light is knowledge, with which problems are solved.

Tomorrow's editorial in the SUN-TELEGRAPH may interest you.

These Modern Lovers

A lover's quarrel takes away a man's appetite; but it makes a woman so miserable that she lays off her reducing diet and starts eating everything, regardless of what may happen to her figure.

The honeymoon is over when the bride discovers that married life is going to be a series of blue Monday mornings, instead of one long, glamorous Saturday night.

Social distinctions are so funny these days, that a man who can boast that he lost "all his money" in Wall street feels that he can high-hat the Simple Soul who never tried to beat the market, and still has $10 to lend him.

* * *

The emotions which some men mistake for "love" are so far from the genuine article as is the doggerel which some people call "poetry."

* * *

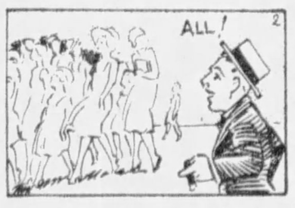
A modern marriage may not always be a brilliant success; but the fact that two people got as far as the altar proves that, at least, for a few unselfish moments, they MEANT well by each other.

* * *

How many women can a man love in a lifetime? Well, let's see—how many women ARE there?

* * *

There are times when every girl would like to be some man's "good little pal"—until she discovers whether or not she wants to marry him.



A man gets about as much thrill out of paying alimony as he would out of paying back installments on a car that was wrecked in a smash-up.

No amount of money will make a married pair happy, if they have short-changed themselves on love, faith and sympathy.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, July 15. — While redecorating was being done in the family bedroom, I decided to spend a night in one of those flashy off-Broadway hotels. I heard of one whose clientele consisted largely of doubtful figures in the White Way flow, gents who live by wits and such.

The clerk who roomed me asked cash in advance, although I carried toilet accessories in a hand grip. The bellboy was the alert type of hustler who inquired solicitously if I might be needing anything to drink. And seemed annoyed when I replied ice water would suffice.

After looking about the room and doubtful of ability to sleep I went to the lobby and lounged in one of the deep-cushioned wall divans. The lobby was milling with after-theater crowds, the usual sort, but perhaps my imagination was keyed up to regard it as a little more tense.

A hard-bitten maewestish blonde with a forlorn poodle and continuous cough, took a seat near and watched the revolving door expectantly. Her wait was rewarded by a chunky fellow, sporting a Brazil diamond, who chirped: "Lo, Kitten!" They talked in whispers. And he went out. A gigolo!

I was interested in her part of the drama of a Times Square night. Her cough had an alarming rasp. In a minute or so she went up in the elevator and soon came down again. Without her poodle—eyes kohled and lips freshly reddened. I followed her across Broadway and eastward over Forty-fourth street. Midway the block she stopped to talk to a man unsteady on his feet, an easy pickup. They walked off quickly.

* * *

In front of the Lamb's, Pat, the night elevator man for more than 30 years, was trying to tag a vagrant breeze. Pat is one of life's Tommy Popes who brings to the bleak obscurity of his job sudden murmured wisdoms and shy humor. On the downhill coast he is content to rub elbows with and run inglorious errands for stage celebrities. Pat lost many friends the past few years—friends who idled a moment to exchange confidences: Wilton Lackeye, Winchell Smith, James J. Corbett, Fritz Williams, William Courtenay, Willis P. Sweatnam and the more youthful Jack Donahue, who would do a diminutive version of an old Irish jig for Pat. If no one were around.

Arnold Bennett, most accomplished of prowlers, would enjoy the Roaring Forties in that dead calm before the city swims up from its deep well of sleep. Shady hotels now and then erupt couples, sheepishly furtive. A woman seemed stricken under the Belasco Theater marquee. Taxis swerved in to her, but quickly shot away. Sprawling figures, mouth agape, in a Hippodrome areaway. A single light blazed in the lobby of the Algonquin. The attendant at an all night shooting gallery in Sixth avenue yawned, reached in an upper shirt pocket for "the makin's!"

Back in my rented hotel room again voices through the thin partition indicated a gay session next door. Someone trying to dial Abe Lyman's band in California. Abe is an old pal of his. Floating bits of conversation . . . "Eddie picked up some smart money in New Orleans and sent for Clara." . . . "Keep quiet, will you, this house dick is no Santa Claus" . . . "That flat-chested Drop Stitch Annie has been gunning for me since his wife died" . . . "Let's barge up to Harlem, pop a few reefers and hear Gladys sing." . . .

I had dozed off lightly when the phone tingled. A feminine voice: "You Mitch?" When I replied negatively a bit ungraciously she snapped "Don't get Tiffany." And hung up. Next door a lady attained the weeping stage. She was going back to Muncie, Ind., and never "see this rotten town again." No use to try sleeping. I dressed. A pair of military hair brushes had vanished.

* * *

Dawn comes ugly to Broadway. Harshly. Roysterers were piloting another drunk down the hall. A man shouted an oath across a court. In the foyer scrubwomen, rheumatic and dripping, paused to look up with spaniel docility. "A phine mairn-in, sir!" one called. Out on the streets the comic and grotesque seemed to come up like a toadstool. A newsie shadow boxing. A shuffling derelict picking some horrid fragment from a restaurant refuse bin!

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Discouraged, aren't you, partner?

Desperately worried about bills; sick with fear of the future? I know. I'm worried, too. And there's no let up. No escape from the nagging dreariness; no saving margin of comfort, or fun.

Once you wondered how people could ever grow sick of life. Now you're sick of it yourself. What's the use of living, with the kick all gone?

BUT THE KICK ISN'T ALL GONE!

There's more kick in life for the average citizen than there ever was before. Despite depressing assurances, there's a greater chance. It isn't the sort of kick or change we dreamed of having in the days before the crash. We can't, any longer, wallow and waste, like youngsters let loose in a candy store. These are hungry, hard days—and they're likely to be hungrier and harder before they are through.

YET, IN SPITE OF ALL THAT, THEY ARE THE GREATEST DAYS THE COMMON PEOPLE HAVE EVER KNOWN! FOR THIS IS THE WORKER'S FIRST CHANCE TO GET A SQUARE DEAL—AND KEEP IT AFTER HE GETS IT!

There have been depressions before in human history, revolutions—savage, bloody affairs, which seemed to result in victory for the under-dog. But the victory never lasted. It never lasted, because the under-dog could only think and fight like a dog. He was not prepared to think and fight like a man. So the Master Minds, on the aristocratic shoulders, took the under-dog's victory away almost as soon as he had gained it.

And now we are in the midst of another depression, another revolution. But the picture is changed. Ragged, hungry, cheated men are once more fighting for their rights. But they are no longer fighting aimlessly, ignorantly. They are fighting with weapons which ragged men have never had before.

You and I, partner—the workers of 1933—have information and training which even those victorious Master Minds of those other revolutions did not possess. We, ourselves, have built this world in which we are living, and we know what it's all about. We read daily papers. We are educated in free public schools. We listen to nightly radio broadcasts. We know all the tricks, and we have the technique.

Bent? Sure we are. All of us worried and mad. Many of us homeless, hungry, ragged. Bent? Yes. BUT NOT BROKEN.

For though the powers-that-were could strip us of our money, our jobs and our chance. THEY COULDN'T STRIP US OF OUR MAKINGS. AND NEVER BEFORE HAVE FIGHTERS FACED A WAR WITH SUCH GRIM AND GLORIOUS MAKINGS!

For this IS war, and we are fighters. But we no longer fight as ignorant under-dogs. We fight as men—as free men fight for the world which they have made.

AND WE HAVE THE MAKINGS OF VICTORY!

Remember that, when things seem desperate—when life seems to have lost all pride, and power, and purpose. You suffer; yes. But you do not suffer as an individual failure; as a shameful derelict. You suffer as a soldier suffers—for a great cause.

Rags and hungry bellies are dreary things, humiliating exhibits, in times of plenty. BUT THEY ARE CHALLENGING THINGS, AS HONORABLE AS MEDALS, WHEN THEY ARE INCURRED IN A BATTLE FOR ALL HUMANITY!

Lift up your head! Lift it up above your own wounds, your own losses. These are tremendous days!

We are not on the skids. We are in the trenches. This is not "just another depression." You are not "just one of the unemployed!" You are part of the most powerful offensive the world has ever known.

Be proud of that! Accept your pain as a brave man accepts the inevitable hardship of the trenches. The hour has come! Get ready to go over the top!

THIS IS OUR WAR! LET'S GO!

(Copyright, 1933, King Features Synd., Inc.)

Isn't It So?

Goodness isn't worth much if it is kept on the inside.

One does not choose friendships; they grow spontaneously.

The best of everything comes to the man who waits on himself.

Most persons will agree that "it is more blessed to give than to receive" advice.

You can identify the man who is graduated from the school of experience by the scars.

Its War Record

By EDWIN C. HILL

THE Disarmament Conference of Geneva, after nearly two years of futile talk, folds up its tents and steals away—though not quite so silently as the Arabs.

For nearly two years nationalistic points of view collided with the dreams of internationalism. The irresistible force collided with the immovable body. In other words, no nation was willing to surrender a kind or type of armament or military weapon which it considered necessary to its own protection in this disordered world.

Peace, permanent peace, is a great ideal, but it seems that any approach to it is impossible with the world in such commotion, in such fear and apprehension, as exists today. The specter of Hitler, in Germany, as he shouts for the destruction of the Treaty of Versailles, is enough to ruin any peace conference and disarmament hopes.

Poland, Czechoslovakia, Jugoslavia, Rumania and a half dozen other smaller nations are the children of the Treaty of Versailles. They exist because of the Treaty of Versailles. They would fight to the death to maintain that treaty in every important article. What chance has the ideal of permanent peace in a world so tense and nervous with the fear of tomorrow.

Efforts to Abolish Submarine Fail

AT Geneva, therefore, no nation was willing to relinquish any powerful weapon which it considered especially suited to its own needs. Every effort to abolish the submarine failed. If the six-gun of Col. Colt made all men equal, the submarine has come as near as any major military weapon could do to make all nations equal. No war machine of land or sea has ever inspired such terror and mystery as the steel wolf which prowls under the surface of the sea, turning one fierce eye, like the eye of Cyclops, this way and that for helpless victims.

It was Simon Lake who perfected his first successful submarine boat 38 years ago, in Pleasantville, N. J. He was captivated by Jules Verne's "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," one of the most remarkable anticipations of a mechanical miracle that was ever put into imaginative fiction. Twenty years later Simon Lake was trying out his first submarine. Since that time he has built many under-sea torpedo boats for the United States and for foreign governments.

Only a little while ago, in New York waters, this man of 65 exhibited his newest invention, a baby submarine, only 22 feet long, not much bigger than a rowboat. It is a sea floor flivver-tank, for it can crawl upon the bottom of the sea, and also move sidewise, a mechanical crab. Under this baby submarine tank is a hatchway through which a diver can emerge to walk upon the bottom, while he searches the sea floor with a powerful flashlight. The queer contraption has at its bow a mechanical hand, worked by electrical machinery. This hand can be made to reach out and grasp any object, whether it be a mess of oysters or a chest of gold.

But it's gold—lost, sunken gold—that Simon Lake has in mind as he works upon his newest baby; the gold of the Lusitania, far down in the green deep off the old Head of Kinsale; the gold of scores of wrecked treasure ships. His lifelong dreams have centered around this object—snatching from Davy Jones the gold stolen from dead and living.

Invented by Robert Fulton

BUT Simon Lake was not the inventor of the submarine. That distinction goes to Robert Fulton, who designed the first practical machine in 1800.

It wasn't the German but the French navy that made submarines a real factor in naval warfare. The French had a fleet as far back as 1901. But it was not until the World War that a full realization came of what a frightful weapon a submarine can be.

On September 22, 1914, the world was stirred as it seldom had been before by the shock of the news that one small German under-sea boat, the U-9, had sunk, in less than an hour's time, three great British cruisers, the Cressy, Hogue and Abourkir, with a loss of 1,400 drowned men.

The next shock came with the news that the Lusitania, the fastest ship that sailed the sea, had been sent plunging to the bottom off the Irish coast, taking with her in her tragic end 1,200 men, women and children, hurled from warmth and cheer and laughter into terror and the agonies of parting and dreadful death from which there was no escape.

All so useless and so fatal even to the ambitions of the power which employed the weapon. For unrestricted use of the submarine brought the United States into the war, brought the imperial German government crashing down in ruins, and brought misery and humiliation to the German people.

Altogether, 278 submarines were destroyed during the war—sunk by gunfire or depth bombs, or trapped in steel nets—and of these, 205 belonged to Germany. A terrible price to pay for the Cressy, the Hogue and the Abourkir, for the Lusitania and all the other victims of the wolf of the sea!

Perhaps that thought comes sometimes to the white-bearded exile of Doorn, as he pauses in his wood-chopping, leaning on his ax, to send his gaze toward the western horizon, toward the ocean that ruined him.
